PALMIST, FEAR GONE, TO FIGHT CAPTAIN

POST-SCRIPTS

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

"Variety's the very spice of life, That gives it all its flavor."

Billy Green, of the A. F. of L., demands for labor every year a two-week vacation at Miami as well as one at Atlantic City.

Charlie Chaplin is quite ill of pneumonia poisoning. Something wrong with one of the casters?

Lost: Celebrated tradition of Senatorial courtesy. When found, please return to I. Lennox, City. Reward.

The Senate astounds itself by passing the Nicaraguan canal bill in a ship-shape manner without staging a dog fight.

Eighty years have passed since an American Army officer—who, incidentally, had commanded the District troops in the war with Mexico—began the first survey for a transisthmian railroad, and now the canal that Theodore Roosevelt later built is no longer adequate to meet the demands of the world's commerce.

The gold rush to California increased the necessity for a short-cut to the West Coast, but today our merchant marine brings back cargoes more precious than the product of the mines.

As we recall it the old Walker Commission, in its final report to Congress a quarter of a century ago, advocated the construction of a canal across Nicaragua, and Congress adopted the Panama route at the last minute, just to be different. We can now cross the continent in a few hours by air, but we can't bring back New York's supply of grape juice that way. We need two more canals!

In Roosevelt's day we spread the cost of the Panama Canal, by a bond issue, over a period of 50 years, and Woodrow Wilson lived to build one every twenty days.

Why not leave the Avenue reviewing stands up after the inauguration, and thus solve the housing problem of our starlings?

There was a Senator in town, And he was wondrous wise, He jumped into a bramble bush, And scratched out both his eyes; And when he found his eyes were out,

With all his main and might, He jumped into another bush, And thus restored his sight.

The manner in which the Senate reversed itself last week on the question of ordering the Marines home from Nicaragua leads those who lead to the point of hope that it will do another one of those flip-flops on the $24,000,000 amendment for prohibition enforcement.

We gather that if Secretary Mellon isn't invited to retain his post in the Cabinet it'll be the greatest surprise the Washington correspondents ever handed themselves.

The only thing we know for certain about Mr. Hoover's Cabinet possibilities is that all of them are named Barkis.

Mrs. Blalock goes into the crystal ball and reveals the past.

Chicago goes to the polls today and the hospitals have made preparations for a landslide.

We note by the dispatch from Richmond that hunting is now almost as good in Virginia as it is in S. street, but can you bag any game?

Don't cheer, boys, the poor Congress is dying.

Formulating a plan for women's cooperation in the national defense in time of war is one of the easiest jobs Secretary Davis ever tackled—all he has to do is to get a summary of what they did in the last one.

France denies that she has negotiated a scrap of paper with Belgium.

Members of the Coolidge Cabinet seem to be all dressed up and no place to go.

Jim Davis, going around with it under his arm, doesn't know whether to hang his own portrait in the Department of Labor or the woodshed.

Telephone company is accused of not being a snoper.

Wisconsin judge refuses to countenance criminal proceedings against prominent officials. It is encouraging nowadays to see this happen in any State.

The Senate, at a so-called night session, blocks all attempts to take up the bill for the reappointment of the House of Representatives under the mandate of the Constitution of the United States. That body doesn't care a hoot for anything but law enforcement.

21 DIE, 50 HURT AS STORMS HIT THREE STATES

Mississippi Village Has Death Total of 15; 40 Are Injured.

TORNADO RIPS TEXAS TOWNS KILLING FOUR

Mother and Daughter Are Victims in Arkansas as Wind Strikes.

RELIEF FORCES RUSH TO STRICKEN AREAS

Debris Searched for Bodies in Duncan Where Half of Houses Fell.

Duncan, Miss., Feb. 25 (A.P.)—A heavy windstorm swept through this village this afternoon, killing at least fifteen persons, and left the business section in ruins. Estimates of the injured ranged as high as two score or more, some perhaps fatally. Six Chinese were killed in the collapse of a store and the other victims met death in the collapse of buildings. Two blocks of the business district, about fifteen dwellings and four cotton gins were razed. Only four or five business houses were left standing. Only three white persons were known to have been among the dead. An accurate check of the victims was not possible early tonight because some of them were removed to nearby towns. The storm came about 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Searching parties continued tonight to comb the debris for other victims.

Three Hurt at Alligator. At Alligator, Miss., 6 miles north of Duncan, Miss. N. P. Oswalt and baby and Mrs. Rollins Oswalt and two children were injured in the collapse of their home.

The storm disrupted communication lines into Duncan for a time, and calls for help were sent from Alligator. Physicians and ambulances from surrounding towns responded to the summons. National guardsmen from Clarksdale were ordered by Gov. Bibb tonight to proceed immediately to Duncan, and it was announced that other detachments would be called if necessary.

Operator Reports Disaster. Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 25 (A.P.)—The woman telephone operator at Duncan, Miss., told the Age Herald that twenty persons were known to have been killed by a terrific windstorm that struck that town between 2:30 and 3 p. m. today.

Half the houses in the town were leveled, the operator said, and parties were searching through the ruins for additional bodies. She said the death toll probably would mount as the wreckage was cleared away. At least 100 persons were injured, she added.

From Duncan, the operator said, the devastating winds swept over Alligator, seven miles to the northeast. Reports were that a baby was killed and a woman injured there.

Duncan is a town of about 600 inhabitants and about 100 houses. Ten persons were killed in the collapse of one building while five Chinese went to their death in the fall of another, it was said.

LINDBERGH PUTS BAN ON SECRET MARRIAGE

Surprise Ceremony Is Denied at Morrow Home Where Flier Visits Fiancee.

COLONEL IN FINE HUMOR

Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico, Feb. 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—There will be no surprise, runaway wedding for Miss Anne Spencer Morrow and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose romance with the second daughter of the American Ambassador to Mexico was formally announced to the world on February 12. This much—and little more—was made clear at the Morrow home here today when Col. Lindbergh left his fiancée's side and surrendered himself to reporters long enough to pay graciously the forfeit of fame.

From the high-walled, sun-drenched garden where the affianced couple had been discussing their lovers' plans when the correspondents called, Lindbergh came into the cool shade of an open drawing room to face his inquisitors. His happy expression would have disclosed his high spirits to an unobservant child.

Motioning his callers to wicker chairs facing the Spanish patio, where birds fluttered among the purple bougainvilleas, roses and palms, the colonel, striving to look stern, began, before a first question could be put to him: "I'm glad to see you all; but I have nothing to say."

The oft-repeated words were spoken in a matter-of-fact tone, just as if there were nothing unusual in the circumstances under which he was facing the reporters. But Lindbergh couldn't keep up the pretense. He thawed out as suddenly and as brightly as spring sunshine breaking through thin clouds.

As he caught sight out of the corner of one eye of Miss Morrow's chic sports costume hurriedly vanishing from the romantic scene a boyish smile touched his lips. He looked as if he were having a hard time restraining a desire to laugh.

Under the fire of inevitable questions beginning "when" and "where" he admitted himself a master strategist. To a direct inquiry as to the date of his wedding, he answered blandly, but with a twinkle in his eye that belied his words:

"You have wonderful city here. Every time I come, I like it better."

As often as the leading questions were repeated they were parried by Col. Lindbergh with a suave, "Ask me that a little later, won't you, please?"

Asked if that phrase was to be in his wedding, he answered blandly, but with a twinkle in his eye that belied his words:

"You have wonderful city here. Every time I come, I like it better."

MELLON HAS NO OFFER OF POST IN NEW CABINET

Hoover Has Not Informed Treasury Chief That He Will Remain.

SECRETARY OF LABOR UNCERTAIN OF PLACE

Presence of Robinson and Donovan's Call Puzzle Political Observers.

By CARLISLE BARGERON. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has not been definitely tendered a place in the Hoover Cabinet. In fact, if there is no understanding between the President-elect and Treasury Secretary between now and noon Monday the latter will submit his resignation along with other members of the Coolidge official family.

Of course, if this understanding is not reached it will be the greatest surprise that the public generally will receive.

The Secretary, it has been reliably learned, occupies very much the same position as does Secretary of Labor Davis. They both have some expectation of remaining. Mr. Mellon probably more than Mr. Davis, and there has developed a strong belief that Davis will remain.

Doak Out of Running. William N. Doak, head of the railway trainmen, who has been most prominently mentioned for the Labor post, has been eliminated. He has been killed off by the factionalism in organized labor.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Davis has received some indirect word that Mr. Hoover might call upon him to remain and sounded out as to whether he would be available, just as other men throughout the country have been approached by representatives of Mr. Hoover, the inquiries in some instances causing the person approached to get unreasonably optimistic.

The Labor Secretary is prepared to leave. The portrait which retiring Cabinet members present to their departments is ready, some of his personal office belongings are packed. But he is just as ready to stay, and with Doak's elimination the chances are good for his doing so.

Mellon's Status Puzzles.

The relation between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mellon is different. There was what was generally interpreted as a tacit campaign promise that Mr. Mellon would be retained. It has never been clearly developed just what form this so-called promise took but Mr. Hoover is reported to have remarked that if he were elected he would like Mr. Mellon to remain and subsequently Mr. Mellon was represented as saying that he would like to remain.

Shortly after Mr. Hoover's return from South America, Mr. Mellon was a luncheon guest and the wide belief prevailed that an understanding had been reached at that time. It was not, and neither was one reached at the conference of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mellon a few days ago.

Of course, under the circumstances it would be hazardous to say that Mr. Mellon will not be in the Cabinet after March 4. As said before there will be general surprise if he is not.

The point is that Mr. Mellon cannot himself confidently say now whether he will or will not be. There is reason to believe that he expects to be.

May Be Hoover's Policy.

The state of affairs may mean nothing more than Mr. Hoover's desire to make no definite commitments. On the other hand, there is no forgetting the fact that on one occasion in the Coolidge Cabinet there was very sharp disagreement between Mr. Mellon and Mr. Hoover. Neither was Mr. Mellon ever enthusiastic about Mr. Hoover's nomination.

In view of all this the continued presence in and about the Hoover home of Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, lawyer and reparations expert.

LEAHY QUESTIONS MRS. BLALOCK

William E. Leahy, chief counsel for Capt. Guy E. Burlingame, is shown here as he cross-examined Mrs. Helen F. Blalock during the second day of the sensational trial.

MRS. BLALOCK ENDS ORDEAL OF 7 HOURS READY TO PROCEED; WHOLE LIFE BARED

Cross-Examined Mercilessly, by Leahy, Woman Tells of Her Other Adventures in Underworld; Tears Protect Her Family.

DEFENSE CONCLUDES GRILLING; WITNESS IS FINALLY EXCUSED

Appears Before Grand Jury Today, Burlingame's Trial Being Laid Aside Until Tomorrow; Tells of More Gifts and of Keeping $2,500 Diamond Ring.

Mrs. Helen F. Blalock, henna-haired, middle-aged "dream girl" who has become a nightmare to Capt. Guy E. Burlingame, the police captain whose 33-year record as a policeman is threatened as a result of her charges against him, last night threw aside her professed deadly fear of the police officer, and offered to stay in Washington indefinitely to push her charges against him to a victorious conclusion.

Mrs. Blalock's offer came at the end of seven hours of bitter cross-examination before the special police trial board trying Burlingame on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and prejudicial to the good order, reputation and discipline of the Police Department.

It was a grueling day for the former Seventh street palmer and one-time friend of the suspended commander of the Second Police Precinct. Her cross-examination had been ended and she had been finally excused from the witness stand and further attendance at the trial board proceedings when she made her offer of continued help to the prosecution.

Throughout the hours of relentless questioning William E. Leahy, defense counsel, sought to force her to admit that her charges against Burlingame were inspired by personal enmities of Burlingame, including former Policeman Orville E. Staples, dismissed by a trial board of which Burlingame was a member, and Representative Tom Blanton, of Texas, avowed enemy of the police captain.

Becomes Hysterical Three Times.

Mrs. Blalock admitted that Staples had arranged for her to present her charges to Representative Gibson, chairman of the House District subcommittee, at a secret meeting at night in the Bethesda, Md., police station, but said that she had sought Staples of her own accord. Three times she became hysterical and sobbed as Leahy questioned her about her father and sisters.

"You can do anything you want to me, but please, please leave my family out of this," she sobbed. Leahy did not force her to answer his questions.

Recovering her equanimity each time the woman fought back as best she could to prevent Leahy from tearing to pieces the carefully prepared story she had told in detail on direct examination on the first day of the trial on Saturday.

Gets Her Record Tangled.

Cornered time after time by relentless questioning she fell back on a memory which became defective on many occasions when it seemed her examiner was about to force an admission which would materially weaken her charge against the man who, she said, called himself her "heartsease daddy" and "such other appellation."

As the day wore on she filled the record with contradictions, evasions, and dubious reidentifications of documents she previously had identified "absolutely" and admitted that she had been mistaken on several points.

But she stuck to her story that Burlingame made love to her, showered her with gifts of thousands of dollars, repaired her apartment, sent her house furnishings and dress goods, and identified flatly a diamond ring, now in the possession of Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Collins, as one which Burlingame had taken in the course of a raid and presented to her, subsequently offering her $2,500 for its return.

When she left the witness stand, when the trial was adjourned a few minutes before 9 o'clock last night, to be resumed at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, she seemed as fresh and buoyant as when she took the stand a few minutes after 10 o'clock in the morning.

She had been in tears, at mention of her father's name, a few minutes before, but immediately she was excused from the stand she offered the prosecution to remain here as long as the trial lasts and not only go on the stand again, if needed, but to help and advise in the attack on future defense witnesses.

Mrs. Blalock is to go before the grand jury at 11 o'clock this morning. Collins said he thought she would be through in two hours. Then Mrs. Blalock said she would feel free to talk to newspaper reporters.

It is understood that she asked for and was promised continued protection by agents of the Department of Justice as long as the proceedings against Burlingame continued.

Heavily, but calmly, she admitted, under cross-examination, pages from her past involving other houses of ill repute than that which she admitted on Saturday having conducted in Alexandria, Va., several years ago but fell into tears when she feared her sisters, residing in Washington, were to be brought into the case.

She capped her testimony with the admission that she could not prove the story she told of her relations with Burlingame.

CANAL BILL PASSED WITHOUT ROLL CALL

Confusion Follows First Move to Build Waterway in Nicaragua.

$3,000,000 OPTION PAID

By ALBERT W. FOX.

The Nicaraguan canal bill passed the Senate yesterday without a roll-call, thereby initiating the first move toward actual building of a second canal linking the Atlantic and Pacific. To the surprise of all concerned, the important legislation sponsored by Senator Edge, slipped through opposition lines without any last-minute fight against it.

The Senate itself was so surprised at its own action in expediting the bill without the usual delay and filibustering that for upward of half an hour there was confusion as to how to deal with the Southwest Market slide bill which became the unfinished business.

Senator Tydings, who wished to oppose this latter bill, had left the Capitol with the understanding that limitation of debate would not begin until 4 o'clock on the Nicaraguan resolution. It was necessary for Senator Glass, in charge of the market bill, to "talk against time," as he put it, in order to wait for the return of Senator Tydings. The latter finally arrived at 4:05, after Glass had consumed half an hour in what he described as the only "time-consuming speech" of his career.

The Nicaraguan bill provides for the expenditure of $150,000 for a survey to be made by direction of the Secretary of War of routes for the prospective American canal across Nicaragua.

Amendments were accepted which permit the President to survey all routes and to negotiate with governments other than Nicaragua if he desires. The bill also authorizes the chief of engineers of the Army to make an engineering survey and investigation for the purpose of determining the possibilities and cost of enlarging the Panama Canal to cope with future demands of shipping.

The United States Government has an option on a canal route across Nicaragua, for which it has paid $3,000,000. The policy of the United States with respect to Nicaragua has been influenced to some extent all along by the proprietary interest America has had in the prospective canal route.

PHONES HELP SALE OF LIQUOR, CHARGE

Company Is Accused at Gibson Committee Meeting of Aiding Bootleggers.

HEATED DENIALS MADE

The local telephone company was charged with being in "caboose" with gamblers and bootleggers at a meeting yesterday of the Gibson subcommittee of the House District committee.

Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the United Committee for Law Enforcement, declared that 70 per cent of the law violators here had unlisted telephones, and that the company refused to give the numbers to police officials.

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, and Inspector Henry G. Pratt, assistant superintendent, told the subcommittee that what Howard said was true. Pratt declared that in many cases a gambling headquarters will be connected with several branch establishments in such a way that the messages will not even go through the telephone company exchange.

Pratt said he had appealed to an official of the company to adopt an arrangement whereby a trusted police official could get information about the unlisted numbers, but that no understanding was reached. The official, Pratt said, explained that if the company gave out such information it would make itself liable to damage suits.

W. B. Clarkson, assistant to president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., made the following statement after the hearing:

"The policy of the telephone company is not to give service to any persons engaged in an unlawful business. If the Police Department will secure

Violence Threats Precede Today's Election in Chicago

Police Hope Thorough Precautions Will Halt Heralded Attacks on Aldermanic Candidates and Officials; Guarding Polls Halts Gang Massacre Inquiry.

Chicago Feb. 25 (U.P.)—Chicago is going to have another election tomorrow and the usual prospects of terrorism, kidnappings and machine gun action were promised by word which passed through subterranean channels to police headquarters today.

The "bloody Twentieth" Ward, in previous elections, was bidding for the center of attraction again on the eve of voting for aldermen of the city's 50 wards. This district, where one murder and several beatings and kidnappings, caused the most trouble in the hectic primary last April.

Commissioner of Police William F. Russell announced tonight that officers, armed with shotguns, would patrol every polling place in the city to prevent intimidation of voters or violence to election workers and candidates.

Extra guards will be used in the Twentieth, Fourth and Fifth Wards, where threats and complaints have reached headquarters. Alderman A. J. Prignano, who is seeking reelection, was threatened with death unless he withdrew from the race, Albert R. Brunner, head of the Chicago Civic Commission, told authorities.

His opponent, William V. Facelli, who is said to have the backing of the Eller organization, appeared at headquarters and denied that he had any connection with the threats. City Collector Morris Eller and his son, Judge Emanuel Eller, leaders of the faction bearing their name, are under indictment in connection with the murder of Octavius C. Granady, candidate for ward committeeman, who was slain in the "bloody Twentieth" outbreak last April.

The Eller forces were blamed by Charles Eaton, candidate for alderman in the Fifth Ward, for threats made to quarters to Eaton workers. Alderman Leonard Grossman, Eaton's opponent, has the support of Mayor Thompson's organization.

Thompson men in the adjoining Fourth Ward charged that two workers for B. A. Cronson, nephew of Corpora-

Cowboy Actor, Engaged Girl Elope in Scenario Fashion

Parental Blessing Only Detail Lacking; Daughter of Prominent Chicagoan Drops Fiance to Marry Cowboy Entertainer After Short Courtship.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 25 (A.P.)—A Western romance, with all the elements of a movie scenario except the final fade out after parental blessings, was unfolded today following the elopement of Miss Katherine Thorne, 21, with George Gillespie, Arizona cowboy entertainer and currier dealer.

Miss Thorne, the daughter of Robert J. Thorne, former president of Montgomery Ward & Co., and Gillespie were married at a hotel here last night as the culmination of a whirlwind courtship that overrode objections on the part of the bride's parents.

A broken engagement figured in the romance for the betrothal of Miss Thorne to Clymer S. Bowen, formerly of Piedmont, Calif., was announced at a dinner party at the Thorne apartment in Chicago January 29.

Shortly afterward the society girl came to Castle Hot Springs, Ariz., with her parents for the winter season. Gillespie wooed her and the elopement followed.

MRS. BLALOCK GETS TANGLE IN STORY

Capt. Burlingame. It will remain simply a case of her word against his, admitted the former Seventh street palmer who is through with palmerism forever.

For a few moments after the trial was adjourned at 4:47 o'clock in the afternoon for dinner, to reconvene at 7:30 o'clock at night, Mrs. Blalock talked to newspaper reporters.

She intends to return to Chicago as soon as she is free to do so, but plans to remain there but a little while—until she completes certain business which is pending when she will return to Washington. She intends to go into business here, she said, but she does not know just what.

"Palmerism?" she was asked. "Never again," Mrs. Blalock said, with a smile.

The interview was cut short when Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Collins asked her not to talk to newspaper reporters until she had finished her testimony before the police trial board.

Later, she said, she would be glad to talk, evidently having lost her first fear of writers, which was so great that she insisted the department of justice shield her from their questioning.

Blanton Knew Whereabouts. Representative Blanton, of Texas, friend and adviser of Mrs. Blalock and publicly avowed enemy of Burlingame, knew how to get in touch with Mrs. Blalock throughout the entire period the department of justice was staging a "nation-wide" hunt for her. It was disclosed by Mrs. Blalock that her desire to protect Representative Blanton was almost equal to her hysterical desire to keep her sisters out of the case, once declaring that "I decline to answer" when Leahy told her that if she did decline to answer a question about Blanton he would accept that and not insist on an answer.

Mrs. Blalock said she went direct to Chicago after leaving Blanton in Abilene, Tex., and there sought out a man named Doland with a message from Blanton, and Doland gave her a job there.

The job was "folding" for a lithograph. She said she was a lithographer. The name of Orville Staples, former district policeman who was dismissed from the force by a trial board which Capt. Burlingame was a member of, was brought prominently into the trial under the questioning of Leahy.

Mrs. Blalock admitted that it was Staples who arranged her interview with Representative Gibson, whom she called "colonel," at the Bethesda, Md., police sub-station three days before she was at that night, secret conference, that Mrs. Blalock made her first statement of accusations against Burlingame. These subsequently were embodied in a formal affidavit made under the guidance of Representative Blanton, in Abilene, Tex. She said she paid her own expenses, she insisted.

Leahy tried to get her to admit that Staples had sought her out in her home at 1504 Seventh street northwest, either during or shortly after Staples was being tried by a trial board and two other police officers.

Visits Made by Strangers. Mrs. Blalock said some man, accompanied by a woman and a child, had come into her home about 10 o'clock one night and the woman had asked a reading, but she had refused to give her one, saying it was too late at night.

"She could not see the man clearly, she said, because he was crouched down behind the woman."

Leahy pleaded that she had subsequently met and knew both Staples and Mrs. Staples and she ought to be able to say whether it was Staples and his wife and child who had appeared at her apartment on that night. She insisted that she could not identify them, however, declaring she had talked with them only a very few minutes.

Leahy also attempted to force an admission from her that a man named Malby, an investigator for Blanton, who was attorney for Staples in that trial board proceeding, had come to her and sought to get her to make charges against Capt. Burlingame.

She said another man had come to her and sought to "have a reading" but she told him she gave readings only to women and he had gone away without talking about anything else.

"Did you not tell Capt. Burlingame I mean Capt. Burlingame that a gray-haired man with a mouth full of gold teeth and grinning like a Cheshire cat, came to see you," Leahy demanded.

"I did not," she replied.

"You did not tell—"

"That was what Capt. Burlingame said, those were his words," Mrs. Blalock said. She said she had told Burlingame about the visits immediately afterwards because she thought he had sent the visitors.

Burlingame, she said, described Staples and Malby as "Blanton's pimps."

It was late in the afternoon that the henna-haired, low voiced and stylishly dressed witness made her first reference to Burlingame as other than "Capt. Burlingame."

Leahy was seeking to discredit her ability to identify one of the type-written and unsigned love letters that Burlingame is charged with sending her. She said that they talked together about that particular letter as they had about all others he wrote her.

"He'd string you along with apple sauce," she declared.

"Tell us how 'he'd string you along,'" Leahy asked in a jovial manner, "maybe we can learn something we don't know."

"You've got some one right there beside you who can coach you," Mrs. Blalock replied with more than a touch of asperity.

Time after time Mrs. Blalock would declare, "I don't remember," "I can't say," in response to questions.

Leahy throughout the day sought to discredit her statements that she feared Burlingame, pointing out that, according to her own story, their relationship lasted months from the day she said she began to feel afraid of the police captain.

Reiterates She Feared Him. "I feared him," she said over and over again. "Yes, I feared him."

She declared that Burlingame had had a key to her apartment at 1504 Seventh street for months. She did not give it to him, he took it; yes, she got it back; he gave it back to her when she asked him to; yes, he got it again; she gave it to him.

"Because I feared him," she said. She told the same story of Burlingame's frequently interrupted possession of the key to her apartment, 1504 Seventh street northwest.

Throughout the day Leahy's questioning was designed not to develop testimony that there was no close association between Burlingame and Mrs. Blalock, but that the association which did exist was a business relationship.

No Mrs. Blalock said that she was not so. She had gone to see Burlingame first because he was a new captain in the precinct and her palmer's license had "not gone through."

"Had you met him before?" "I met him when he was a detective sergeant," she replied.

"I don't know just the year. It might have been 1912 or 1913."

"How did you meet him on that occasion?"

Protects Her Sisters. There was a silence. Mrs. Blalock looked appealingly at Corporation Counsel William W. Bridge and Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Leahy several times tried to get her to say that someone else paid whole or a part of the expense of that trip to the answer on that point, she was unequivocal. She paid her own expenses, she insisted.

Leahy tried to get her to admit that Staples had sought her out in her home at 1504 Seventh street northwest, either during or shortly after Staples was being tried by a trial board and two other police officers.

Visits Made by Strangers. Mrs. Blalock said some man, accompanied by a woman and a child, had come into her home about 10 o'clock one night and the woman had asked a reading, but she had refused to give her one, saying it was too late at night.

"She could not see the man clearly, she said, because he was crouched down behind the woman."

Leahy pleaded that she had subsequently met and knew both Staples and Mrs. Staples and she ought to be able to say whether it was Staples and his wife and child who had appeared at her apartment on that night. She insisted that she could not identify them, however, declaring she had talked with them only a very few minutes.

Leahy also attempted to force an admission from her that a man named Malby, an investigator for Blanton, who was attorney for Staples in that trial board proceeding, had come to her and sought to get her to make charges against Capt. Burlingame.

She said another man had come to her and sought to "have a reading" but she told him she gave readings only to women and he had gone away without talking about anything else.

"Did you not tell Capt. Burlingame I mean Capt. Burlingame that a gray-haired man with a mouth full of gold teeth and grinning like a Cheshire cat, came to see you," Leahy demanded.

"I did not," she replied.

"You did not tell—"

"That was what Capt. Burlingame said, those were his words," Mrs. Blalock said. She said she had told Burlingame about the visits immediately afterwards because she thought he had sent the visitors.

Burlingame, she said, described Staples and Malby as "Blanton's pimps."

It was late in the afternoon that the henna-haired, low voiced and stylishly dressed witness made her first

Highlights in Mrs. Blalock's Seven Hours of Testimony

Mrs. Blalock overcame her professed fear for her life and offered to remain here until the charges against Burlingame have been pushed to a conclusion.

"We will both go to hell together if you make my affairs public," Mrs. Blalock said Burlingame threatened.

The disorderly house she ran in Alexandria, Va., several years ago was only one of her similar experiences, she admitted.

Representative Blanton knew she was in Chicago while she was being sought by Department of Justice agents. Blanton arranged for her to get a job in Chicago, she testified.

Orville Staples, district policeman whom Blanton defended, but who was dismissed by a trial board of which Burlingame was a member, arranged for her interview with Representative Gibson at which she first preferred her charges against Burlingame, Mrs. Blalock admitted.

Although evasive, vague and even contradictory at times, Mrs. Blalock stuck to her story that Burlingame was her unwelcome lover, showering gifts of money, jewelry and other things upon her.

A diamond ring, which she said Burlingame appropriated in the course of a raid and gave her, was identified by Mrs. Blalock. Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Collins now has the ring.

Burlingame's love phrases were "apple sauce," she said. Mrs. Blalock became hysterical and broke into sobs three times when she feared members of her family would be brought into the case.

Mrs. Blalock was on the witness stand under cross-examination and rediret examination for more than seven hours.

She had married Edward Shea in 1902, she said. There was one child, a son, whom she had not seen since he was a baby, when he was adopted by others. She died in 1906, she said after a long consideration.

She could not tell how long she had lived outside Washington, Mrs. Blalock said, although she said it was "more than" six months.

Bares Jacksonville Life. Q. What did you do in Jacksonville?—A. I only was in Jacksonville a very short time. Q. How long were you there?—A. A few weeks. Q. What did you do when you were there?—A. I was not employed because I was not there long enough to be employed.

Q. What did you do during the weeks that you were there?—A. What did I do? Q. Yes—A. I was not employed. Q. Where did you live?—A. At a hotel. Q. What was the name of it?—A. I don't remember. Q. Try to think—A. I can't think. Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I said the Courts?—A. If you said what?

Q. The Courts?—A. No, it would not. Q. You never heard of the Courts in Jacksonville?—A. No. Q. Do you know what the Courts is in Jacksonville?—A. No. Q. Don't you know it was the red light district in Jacksonville?—A. Yes, I was there for a while.

Her Marriages Recalled. Q. You were taken from there to Waycross, Ga.?—A. Yes. Q. You lived there with a man?—A. For a few days. Q. What was his name?—A. I don't remember. Subsequently Leahy turned to her room with the man who became her second husband.

Q. You met Mr. Blalock in Norfolk, didn't you?—A. No, I met Mr. Blalock in Washington. Q. Did you ever see him in Norfolk, Va.?—A. I went to Norfolk with him. Q. When? Before or after you were married?—A. Before we were married. Q. You married him in Alexandria, Va.?—A. Yes.

Q. Was he drunk? Mrs. Blalock paused and seemed to consider the matter before answering and then replied, "I don't think so." Her husband divorced her, she said, but she was not certain on what grounds or on whether the divorce action was consummated. "I never bothered myself to find out," she declared. She said that she was a widow on a report repeated to her by either Brice or Fowler that they had heard Blalock was dead, but she was not certain of it.

Discloses Threatening Letter. During a brief recess in the morning session of the trial, Mrs. Blalock made a vulgar and crudely written letter threatening her.

The letter was written in yellow pencil on the stationery of a Pennsylvania avenue hotel, was dated February 23 and was received in the mail yesterday morning at the Burlington Hotel, where she is staying under the protection of men and women agents of the Department of Justice.

Leahy also was told and he told her to pull in her horns before "somebody pokes them in for you" and threatened that "if you don't vindicate him (Burlingame) I will see to it."

Mrs. Blalock dismissed the letter with the comment it was a "nut" letter. Collins and Justice agents dismissed the letter as a trivial and unimportant, although to be disposed of. It was not signed.

Leahy also was the recipient of an anonymous letter, which was addressed to him as counsel for Burlingame at the Sixth Precinct Station and was delivered by a policeman at 10:30 p.m. Sunday night at his home. Leahy threw it away, he said.

Palmer Pretty Dressed. Mrs. Blalock was pretty dressed yesterday as she had been on Saturday. Yesterday she wore another new hat, a close fitting, but of dark blue felt, ornamented with a triangular small silver buckle on the right side. She wore the same gloves and coat and shoes, and again had on light stockings and carried the same large purse of navy blue leather.

But her dress was a new one of flowered silk of blue and red roses on a dark background. The dress was one of those which lap over and is fastened on the side at the waist and as she sat in the witness chair Mrs. Blalock was at pains frequently to keep the folds together. She wore a long gold chain in two loops around her neck.

Burlingame was more spirited yesterday than he was on Saturday, although he was at pains to maintain a poker face. Sometimes he leaned back in his chair, hands clasped around one knee which he crossed over the other. Sometimes he sat sideways in his chair with his head resting on his hand, his elbow on the chair back. At times he yawned, too, this time, real yawns.

He was dressed in a dark-colored suit, with invisible stripes, black shoes, white shirt and soft collar and a black four-in-hand tie.

That the captain is not sitting idly by and letting the case against him take its course was indicated by his frequent and earnest conferences with Leahy and Henry P. Woodard, his attorneys.

Admits Her Mistake. He took advantage of the luncheon recess, too, to employ his training as a detective to get information which Leahy used to force Mrs. Blalock to admit she was mistaken about a registered mail receipt, which she had positively identified on Saturday as a receipt for some shirts which belonged to Burlingame, and which she had mailed to him because he would not take them from her apartment.

shaking her head and compressing her lips. Again when Leahy questioned her about the time she passed in Alexandria she was vague. He declared that she knew Crandal Mackey, her personal attorney, at present, at that time, which she finally admitted. Mackey was an attorney for a friend of hers, she said.

By the Alexandria episode, as a whole, was vague. "The only thing I could think about was all the money I lost there," she said.

"Business was not so good in the old town, eh?" asked Leahy. "No, it wasn't," she replied.

Leahy tried to get an admission that the envelopes which she said had been given her by Burlingame containing money actually contained business papers relating to matters in which the captain was trying to help her, but she denied this.

Burlingame's Money, Claim. There was a long series of questions and answers dealing with a withdrawal of $700 from the Perpetual Building Association.

The money belonged to Burlingame, she insisted, having been given her, but taken back on her insistence. Recently Blanton closed out her account for her, drawing out $61.32, representing interest due on the $700.

"Then you actually owe Capt. Burlingame $228.68 on one account and $38.34 on the other?" Leahy asked. "He gave it to me," she insisted. "But it was his money and the interest is his according to your story, and you owe it to him," Leahy insisted.

"Yes, and I'll gladly return it to him," she replied. Leahy forced frequent admissions from Mrs. Blalock that receipts she offered in support of her charges actually were not receipts, money she turned over to Burlingame, she said, that the money for which she had receipts was returned, at times, weeks after the receipts were dated.

Busy Returning Money to Him. Some times she admitted money given her by Burlingame was not deposited for weeks. She explained the discrepancy between her statements and the record of bank deposits with the statement that "I had so many other things to do and I kept me busy returning money to him."

On several occasions she could not find entries in her bank books showing the deposits she said were made on certain dates in her name by Capt. Burlingame.

Nowhere could she find a deposit of $3,700, although there were two deposits, one for $7,500 and another for $1,300 on different dates than she said.

Beyond the effort of Leahy to develop the inspiration of Blanton and Staples as the source of the charges made by Mrs. Blalock, there has been nothing concrete disclosed to indicate the cause of the break between the police captain and the palmer.

That Mrs. Blalock let one eye on the possible future value of the love letters she says Burlingame wrote her, she said, was disclosed by her answer to a question as to why she never asked Burlingame why he had written the letters on a typewriter and left them in a drawer.

"I didn't need to. I knew," she said, with an air somewhere between satisfaction and apathy.

Asked why she had kept another card she said, "I thought that it might be valuable," and she emphasized valuable, and nodded her head as if her forehead had been rewarded.

SLAIN MAN IS LINKED WITH GRAFT INQUIRY

Queens Borough Official Says
Chauffeur, Shot Dead, Was Witness.

ARREST MADE BY POLICE

New York, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Raymond Clark, a chauffeur, who was shot to death in the Corona section of Queens Borough Saturday, was identified today as an important witness who was to have been called in the grand jury's investigation of graft and bribery in the borough. Fritz Brieger, superintendent of the Queens bureau of street cleaning, said Clark had been a chauffeur for a borough officer for two years prior to last November, when he was discharged. Brieger did not identify Clark's former employer.

"I do not wish to discuss details of the case at this time, but I believe Clark was murdered," said Brieger. Police are holding as a material witness in the killing Edward Duffy, of Corona, with whose wife authorities said Clark had been friendly.

While investigation of the killing continued, Brieger and Borough President George W. Harvey, of Queens, studied a report on borough graft which they will present to District Attorney Newcombe. The evidence includes the names of about 30 employees and former employees of the street cleaning department, and of these at least twenty are expected to be indicted, Brieger said. Harvey, whose chief lieutenant in the preliminary inquiry is Brieger, said the graft was prevalent in both the street cleaning and highway departments and had been traced to previous administrations. Harvey, a Republican, last fall defeated Bernard Patten, Democrat, and choice of the Queens county organization headed by Maurice Conolly, former borough president, who was found guilty of graft and sentenced to one year in prison and to pay a fine of $500. He is out on bail, pending appeal.

MELLON NOT OFFERED PLACE IN CABINET

It is interesting. Mr. Robinson is a very close friend of Mr. Hoover. The curb cabinet market out in front of Mr. Hoover's house yesterday advanced Mr. Robinson for Secretary of Commerce. This may be right, of course. Then it may not be. The Treasury is the place Mr. Robinson has been considered particularly qualified for.

Mr. Hoover, however, is looking for a secretary of commerce. Speculation was particularly rife about Col. William J. Donovan yesterday, too. He came into town from New Mexico, where he is in charge of the Department of Justice work, and went to see Mr. Hoover. Then he disappeared, so completely, that the Hoover household subsequently had all sorts of trouble finding him to tell him to come back today. He is to return either today or tomorrow, it is understood, to New Mexico.

The indications are that Mr. Hoover called him here but whether was to prevail upon him to take the secretaryship of the Department of Justice and for about the impasse situation surrounding the attorney generalship, or whether he was prevailed upon to take nothing, remains to be seen. Circumstances make it more likely that he was offered either the war portfolio or the solicitor generalship.

House Aid Is Promised. Speaker Longworth is a luncheon guest and assured Mr. Hoover that the House would cooperate with him in holding tariff revision within reasonable bounds. Secretary Kellogg was a caller and there is a belief that he may remain on the job for a month until Henry L. Gilson gets here from the Philippines. Senator Duffell, of Pennsylvania, was also in attendance and the belief is that this had to do with the Senate's refusal to permit the repeal of the national origins immigration act. Mr. Hoover wants it repealed, is committed to it.

Both Speaker Longworth and Tom D. Campbell, Montana industrial farmer, said Mr. Hoover already has a definite farm relief plan.

RULING EXONERATES WISCONSIN LEADERS

Criminal Prosecutions Are Refused by Court Against Progressive Chiefs.

NO CORRUPTION REVEALED

Madison, Wis., Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Progressive Republican leaders, including three of the State's principal officers, were vindicated today when Superior Judge S. B. Schein refused to order criminal proceedings started against them for alleged violation of the corrupt practices act.

In the decision handed down in superior court here the judge denied the request of Arthur R. Barry, Milwaukee, special prosecutor, for criminal action, with the statement that "I am satisfied there is no occasion for criminal warrants against any of these men recommended for criminal prosecution." Barry had recommended criminal action against Lieut. Gov. Henry L. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds, Secretary of State Theodore Damman, Representative Joseph D. Beck, defeated candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Samuel Sigman, manager of the progressive primary campaign, and the Capital Times, Madison daily newspaper.

Judge Schein also refused the request that a transcript of the evidence pertaining to United States Senator Robert M. La Follette's primary activities be transmitted to the Senate, saying he was "convinced that he violated no law, either civil or criminal." Barry had charged that a total of $131,128 was spent on behalf of the progressives in the primary campaign, in which Beck was defeated by Walter J. Kohler, conservative leader. Kohler was indicted for conspiracy to defraud the State Circuit Court, seeking to disqualify him from holding office on the grounds of violation of the corrupt practices act through excessive expenditure and other irregularities.

The court made no reference to Barry's recommendation that he be prosecuted in Milwaukee County. Barry had charged Lee with making unreported contributions to the progressive cause.

OFFER OF $250,000 FOR PAINTING DENIED

Witness, However, Says Critic Caused Loss of Interest in
"La Belle Ferroniere."

MOVE TO END SUIT FAILS

New York, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—J. C. Nichols, former president and now director of the Kansas City Art Institute, said in a deposition read in Supreme Court today that the statement of Sir Joseph Duveen that "La Belle Ferroniere," owned by Mrs. Andree Lardoux Hahn, of Kansas City, was not a Da Vinci caused him to lose interest in a project to raise money for purchase of the canvas for the institute.

Earlier in the deposition Nichols denied that the Kansas City Art Institute ever had offered the Hahn $250,000 for the picture. He declared that in 1920, when the offer was supposed to have been made, the institute did not have assets amounting to more than $20,000.

The deposition revealed, however, that he had offered to contribute to a fund to buy the Hahn painting if it were proved to be a Da Vinci, and that he would have asked other prominent residents of Kansas City to raise the funds for the purchase.

Fixed Price at $250,000.

An important point in Mrs. Hahn's $250,000 offer of the picture to the Kansas City Art Institute was that she had been told by Sir Joseph Duveen that the picture was a Da Vinci. Nichols' deposition was taken Saturday in Kansas City in the presence of attorneys for both sides.

Admits Project to Buy. While under cross examination by counsel for Mrs. Hahn, he admitted the project to buy the picture and that Sir Joseph's statement caused him to lose interest in the picture.

Except for reading of the Nichols deposition, two students, John Meeker, day's proceedings and jurors nodded sleepily as counsel for Sir Joseph read long depositions from foreign art experts.

As court adjourned, Sir Joseph's attorneys announced they would produce one more "live witness" before they again argued for dismissal.

Students' Blasts Wreck Building

Part of Bucknell University Destroyed; Youthful Chemists May Recover.

Lewistown, Pa., Feb. 25 (U.P.)—A violent explosion wrecked the chemistry building at Bucknell University here late today. Two students, John Meeker, a senior, of Hunlock Creek, and John Weaver, graduate student of Sunbury, were conducting an experiment in the building after class hours. The compound on which they were working exploded.

The entire front of the building was blown away and fire broke out. The force of the explosion broke windows over the entire campus. The blast was heard for miles around.

The two students were severely burned about the head, chest, arms and body, but were recovered. Students and volunteer firemen extinguished the blaze.

High Seas Halt Tests Of Submarine Escapes

On Board the U. S. S. Mallard (by radio), Feb. 25 (U.P.)—High-running seas again today prevented experimental under-sea tests with the living ball and the submarine escape. The U. S. S. Mallard, commanded by Commander Lais, Italian attaché at Washington, was en route to the Atlantic.

Calm seas were said to be necessary for successful escapes from the submarine by means of the ball.

NICARAGUAN CANAL BILL PASSES SENATE WITH UNEXPECTED EASE

was based on two grounds. One was that the country should not go ahead with plans for a vast canal expenditure until the West and Middle West were provided with inland waterway facilities. The other was that freight rates for the farmers and shippers would be still more to the disadvantage of the interior of the country if two canals instead of one supplied benefits to waterway, as opposed to railroad routes.

Senator Dill maintained that adoption of the resolution would provide an added reason for the retention of American Marines in Nicaragua. The canal would cost a billion or a billion and a half dollars, if it is to be a sea-level canal, he added.

He further maintained that new canal facilities would not be necessary for the next 70 years. Senator McMaster spoke at length against the resolution, taking the position that it would adversely affect the interests of the farmers and would be violative of campaign pledges of farm relief.

Because of past opposition to the bill, it had been necessary to curtail debate and agreement had been reached to limit debate at 4 o'clock. The actual vote came viva voce at 3:30 o'clock. Senators entering the chamber in anticipation of the roll call were informed that it was all over and that the bill had passed.

After passage of the canal bill Senator Harris introduced his $24,000,000 prohibition amendment to the second bill, which was passed by the House yesterday, with realization that a point of order would be made on the ground that it violates rule 16 of the standing rules if necessary.

But if it is decided that the Senate rules interfere with his prohibition amendment, he proposed to suspend or temporarily discard the Senate rules in favor of the $24,000,000 expenditure of the taxpayers' money despite the fact that neither the administration nor the prohibition unit desires this $24,000,000. He gave notice that he would move to suspend the rules if necessary.

Rule XVI applies to amendments to appropriation bills and is designed to protect the taxpayers and the Treasury against precisely the sort of raid on the national resources which is proposed by the amendment.

Loss of Leg in Beauty Operation Nets $8,000

Paris, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Because a plastic surgeon did not warn his client that an operation for slenderizing her legs would be dangerous, Mlle. Suzanne Geoffre was today awarded $8,000 damages by a Paris tribunal. The defendant was Dr. Charles Dujaire, one of the most famous surgeons in Paris.

The testimony showed that Mlle. Geoffre herself had asked the doctor to perform the operation, explaining that her beauty was marred by unusually thick calves. The doctor agreed to undertake the operation and a roll of fat was removed from each leg; the foot turned black, gangrene set in, and the limb had to be amputated.

The court ruled that the operation was purely of an aesthetic nature and not necessary for the maintenance of the young woman's health. Therefore, the surgeon should have warned her of all possible dangers.

Dr. Dujaire denied that the operation was purely of an aesthetic nature and that he had offered to contribute to a fund to buy the Hahn painting if it were proved to be a Da Vinci, and that he would have asked other prominent residents of Kansas City to raise the funds for the purchase.

PACT WITH BELGIUM DENIED BY FRENCH

Secret Military Accord as Published in Germany Believed Forgery.

LEAGUE MAY GET CASE

Paris, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—The so-called Franco-Belgian document published by the Utrecht Dagblad and in German newspapers purporting to show a secret military accord between Belgium and France was described tonight as gross forgeries in circles close to French officials.

In addition a semiofficial note was made public by the Havas News Agency denying that any secret military treaty had been signed between France and Belgium. The note stated that the two countries had signed an accord in 1920 implying an entente between the two general staffs, but this accord was not secret, was registered with the League of Nations and was published by the league two years ago.

Accord Made in 1920. Available references show that a military convention was concluded in August, 1920, between Belgium and France after full consultation between the respective general staffs. The two governments had signed the League of Nations in November, 1920, that this accord had been completed and that it was of purely defensive character. No details were disclosed.

In French circles it was stated that the accord of 1920 not only was ratified openly by both the Belgian and French Parliaments, but was registered with the League of Nations, and was of a purely defensive character in conformity with the spirit and letter of the Kellogg pact signed last year pledging the two nations' armed forces in defense "against unprovoked attack on territory."

Strong sentiment was expressed in Paris against what was termed a maneuver tending to jeopardize Dutch and Belgian interests. The German, French and Italian and even French and Spanish relations, while it was added that the matter in all likelihood would be brought to the attention of the next meeting of the council of the League of Nations in March.

Statement Is Issued. The ministry of foreign affairs tonight issued the following statement: "Certain foreign newspapers yesterday published the text of an alleged accord concluded in 1920 between France and Belgium and also supplementary dispositions reached in 1927. These documents are entirely apocryphal. The French and Belgian governments communicated to the League of Nations on November 2, 1920, letters exchanged relative to a military accord reached on September 7, 1920. This accord was purely defensive in character inasmuch as it was in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law."

Effort will be made today to have the Senate appropriations committee include the $24,000,000 item in the bill. So far, little headway has been made along this line since it became known that the House would not agree to it and that the administration opposed it. But assurances have reached some of the key senators from prohibition headquarters that the newly organized Anti-Saloon League whip can drive hesitant senators into line and either compel the appropriations committee to include the appropriation or compel senators on the floor to abandon the Senate rules in response to orders from outside dry leaders.

Farm House Fire Kills 2 Children and Hurts 6

Sankusky, Mich., Feb. 25 (U.P.)—Two children were dead and six others slightly burned following a fire which destroyed a farm house eight miles northeast of here today. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schuman, parents of the children, rescued the six children, but were unable to bring the other two to safety because of raging flames.

WOMAN ASSAULTED, BURNED IN FURNACE

Little Hope for Recovery Seen of Victim, Wife of Retired Kansas Baker.

ALLEGED ATTACKER HELD

Atchison, Kans., Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Stuffed head first into a blazing furnace in the basement of her home by a colored man, who had assaulted her, Mrs. C. V. Jacobs, 53, wife of a retired baker, was burned probably fatally here today before her attacker was frightened away.

Louis Glover, 37, the alleged assailant, was arrested an hour and a half later and splashed out of town by officers to forestall possible mob action. Mrs. Jacobs was severely burned about the head and shoulders and nearly suffocated but was able to make a statement before she collapsed. Little hope was held tonight for her recovery.

She told officers that Glover, who had been employed as a handy man about the house, attacked her, dragged her down the cellar steps and forced her head and shoulders through the furnace door.

The negro was frightened by the ringing of the door bell when the woman's husband returned home and fled. Jacobs found his wife with her clothing ablaze.

Glover was whisked out of town so rapidly that few persons knew of the alleged attack until late today. There was some scattered talk of vengeance but no demonstrations developed.

Police said the negro at one time was an inmate of a local insane asylum.

AID TO BOOTLEGGERS LAID TO PHONE FIRM

Indictments of any persons so engaged, the telephone company will be only too glad to refuse to give service to such individuals.

"The idea that the telephone company is in collusion with bootleggers and bookmakers in not listing their telephones in the directory is absurd. It is the practice of the telephone company to list where an individual desires it, not to list his name in the directory. There are many people, particularly those in public life, who order us not to publish their names in the telephone directory. It is a privilege any subscriber can exercise and we make no discrimination."

"The telephone company is a public utility and is required to furnish telephone service without discrimination. There are scores of applicants for service every day. If an applicant is going to use his service for an illegal purpose, he is not likely to disclose it to the telephone company."

The testimony of Howard on the liquor situation here was disappointing. He revealed that in his drive to clean up the city before the inauguration of Herbert Hoover he had employed only one investigator. This man, he said, had visited from 350 to 400 speakeries in one month.

Maj. Hesse and Inspector Pratt reiterated their oft repeated statement that what is needed here is legislation that will permit all the members of the local police force to make arrests for liquor violations. As it is, only a limited number of policemen, who have been specially deputized, have the authority to make arrests for such violations.

Chairman Gibson promised that eventually some kind of corrective legislation would be enacted.

In reply to a question by Gibson, Howard estimated that there were from 4,000 to 5,000 bootleggers in Washington. He boosted the figure with Prohibition Commissioner Doran, who estimated that there were about 3,000 here.

WGY APPEAL UPHELD IN CHANNEL SHARING

District Court Holds Radio Station Need Not Split Time With KGO.

REHEARING IS SOUGHT

(Associated Press.)
The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia yesterday sustained the General Electric Co. in its contention that station WGY, at Schenectady, should not be forced to share time with another General Electric station, KGO, at Oakland, Calif., as required in the November 11, allocation of the Radio Commission.

Immediately after the decision was handed down Louis G. Caldwell, general counsel for the Radio Commission, announced that he would ask for a rehearing. In the event a rehearing is not granted, he said he would appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. The case had been taken to court shortly after the November 11 allocation.

As the commission laid plans to fight the decision Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, charged on the floor of the Senate that the court had decided in favor of WGY without considering the opposing views of the commission. In the meantime Mr. Caldwell, in a formal statement, said that the opinion of the court had been handed down before he had answered a brief filed by the General Electric Co. on February 8. The general counsel for the commission cited the court's rules allowing 30 days in which to reply.

Dill says Hughes won case. Senator Dill declares that "the court was so impressed by the very appearance of Charles Evans Hughes that it did not consider the arguments raised by the commission on the opposing side."

Members of the commission were uncertain as to the effect the opinion will have on the present allocation of radio facilities. The General Electric Co. Schenectady station under the general order reallocating frequencies was required to stop broadcasting after 10 p. m. on the Pacific Coast on 780 kilocycles in order to allow WGO to have a clear channel. The court ordered the commission to allow WGY to have the use of the channel full time. If the commission now should decide to allow WGY another channel, it will have to take such a channel from some other station, which procedure, the commission believes, could easily throw the whole wave-length structure into confusion.

"Although the court does not say so," Mr. Caldwell said, "this decision necessarily holds that the November 11 allocation is invalid to the extent that it assigns this channel to the fifth zone and if both WGO and WGY are to continue to operate on it the channel ceases to be a clear channel with the result that all the listening public outside of a comparatively small area around either station will have reception spoiled for them by a heterodyne whistle."

Equalization Plan Ruined.

"It also means," he said, "that the equalization which the commission so carefully worked out between the five zones has been destroyed as between the first and fifth zones with respect to cleared channels. Just as surely as if any, the decision will have on the other portions of general order 40 it is too early to say."

Senator Dill contended that the action of the court demonstrated a need for immediate passage of the Watson-White radio bill continuing the Federal Radio Commission as an administrative body because that bill gives the commission authority to hire competent lawyers at a fee commensurate with the expert service expected. Such lawyers, he asserted, would be able to cope with the talented attorneys being employed by the "radio trust."

State Grants First Permit for Airport
Mount Vernon Airways, Inc., to operate field in Fairfax County.

The first permit to be granted by the Virginia State Corporation Commission to operate an airport within the State has been received by the Mount Vernon Airways, Inc., located on the Washington-Richmond highway at Hybla Valley, in Fairfax County, it was learned last night.

The act governing the permits was introduced by State Senator Frank L. Ball and Delegate Hugh Reid, both of Arlington County. The measure was introduced after Commander Richard E. Byrd and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had recommended such legislation.

The bill requires permits for all civil aircraft plants and licenses for all pilots who have no Federal pilot's permit. It does not require permits for flying fields that were in operation prior to the passage of the measure, but makes it imperative that such fields comply with other provisions of the law.

WATER TREATY PLAN DROPPED BY CANADA

Move for Parley With U. S. on St. Lawrence Power Is Withdrawn.

Ottawa, Ontario, Feb. 25 (A.P.).—At the close of a debate in the house of commons, in which Premier Mackenzie King and R. B. Bennett, leader of the opposition, took part, T. L. Church (Conservative), Toronto, today withdrew his motion asking the government to proceed with negotiations for a treaty with the United States respecting St. Lawrence deep waterways and power development as a public undertaking.

Mr. Church, in introducing his resolution, had warned the liberal government that it was "treason on dangerous ground in granting rights for power on the St. Lawrence to private companies."

Premier King said he objected to the Church resolution because it included too much to consider in one resolution, and also that the present was a critical time for discussing matters of international importance as between Canada and the United States.

While he had no wish to limit debate, the premier said, he felt that the members should realize that what was said might have a bearing on very important matters to be decided in the United States. He did not state, however, what "important matters" these were.

There was a question, the premier said, of whether the dominion government had a right to proceed with the negotiations, and the supreme court had found itself unable to define clearly just how much power the government had to deal with the subject.

Therefore, he said, the dominion government has invited the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec to meet with it immediately after this session of parliament adjourns to see whether some agreement may not be reached as to the relative rights of the dominion and the provinces in power and waterways development on the St. Lawrence.

Mr. King said that whatever agreement eventually might be reached with the United States as regards development of the St. Lawrence there never would be an export of Canadian power. Developed in the St. Lawrence project to the United States. The United States agreed with this attitude, he said.

LINDBERGH SILENT ON DATE OF WEDDING; VISITS FIANCEE

terpreted as meaning that plans for the wedding have not yet been determined, the aviator refused to enlarge upon his statement. But the reporters gathered the impression that the wedding is not far off and that it will be announced when the affianced couple decide when and where it is to take place.

Lindbergh became easier and his manner more amiable as the questions turned to matters of aviation.

Predicts Passenger Route.
With animation, relief and an obvious loss of self-consciousness he turned the talk to the Miami-Panama air line. Undoubtedly passengers will soon be carried over the route," he said. He referred to officials of the Pan-American Airways an inquiry about the use of the island of Cocos, off the Mexican coast, as a possible base for mail and United States Government planes.

Lindbergh said that on his flight to Mexico City yesterday from Eagle Pass, Tex., he landed twice, once at Monterey and again at San Luis Potosi.

Take Exploring Trip.
Before the reporters called this morning Lindbergh and Miss Morrow explored this tranquil, picturesque town on foot and later took an automobile drive through the surrounding country.

At one of the highest points on the plateau of Mexico, the town of La Cima, 10,000 feet above sea level, the correspondents en route to Cuernavaca encountered Ambassador Morrow returning back to the Embassy in Mexico City after his week-end in this semi-tropical resort. He was accompanied by Paul D. Cravath, of New York, who has been a guest at the Morrow home.

"What plans?" he blankly echoed the queries put to him about the wedding. "I have nothing to say. Neither the Morrow family nor Col. Lindbergh will have anything to say. You fellows are wasting your time. You'd better go back to Mexico City. When there's any information we'll send you."

WOMAN CITES ZEAL OF MRS. HAMMONDS

Censored Gov. Johnston's List of Visitors, Testifies Chief Clerk.

RUSE TO FOIL HER FAILED

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—How convinnance of the governor and his woman chief clerk often failed to thwart the alleged domination of the chief executive's office by Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, confidential secretary to Gov. Henry S. Johnston, was told in the senate impeachment court today.

The story was told by Mrs. George W. Way, the chief clerk. Later the prosecution, which, for two weeks had poured testimony into the trial of Johnston, now suspended from office, in an effort to support eleven impeachment charges, concluded its case.

Mrs. Way still is chief clerk, but Mrs. Hammonds resigned her position shortly after the suspended governor's trial got under way.

Conclusion of the prosecution's case caught the defense unawares and the latter immediately obtained a recess of the court until Thursday morning to permit assembling of defense witnesses and the preparation of Johnston's case. At that time counsel for the respondent indicated it will have summoned 72 witnesses and will be ready to proceed with the trial.

One Article Is Dropped.

The prosecuting house board of managers dropped the eighth article of impeachment, which alleges that the governor illegally employed the militia to oppose the assembling of an attempted impeachment session of legislators here in December, 1927. The reduced number of articles upon which the governor is on trial is ten.

Thomas H. Owen, of Johnston's staff of attorneys, in asking for the recess indicated that the respondent would take up each article separately in an effort to disprove the allegations of all the articles. By agreement with the board of managers, the eleven charges were consolidated in the presentation of the prosecution's case under the general charge of incompetency, to shorten the trial.

The prosecution ended its case with the testimony of Mrs. Way, who contributed to a mass of testimony already adduced in an effort to show that Mrs. Hammonds dominated with the governor and the conduct of his office.

Censored Visiting List.

Questioned by John Head, chairman of the house board of managers, Mrs. Way recounted a story of the governor's efforts to circumvent Mrs. Hammonds' efforts to prevent visitors from seeing the governor. Mrs. Hammonds disapproved from gaining audiences with the governor. Mrs. Hammonds sought to prevent visitors from seeing the governor by entering a secret agreement with Mrs. Way whereby the chief clerk informed him of the presence of visitors Mrs. Hammonds sought to prevent Mrs. Hammonds from learning of the plan, she said, she agreed, on the governor's suggestion, to code names for some of the visitors who would announce their presence to the governor with these names.

Mrs. Hammonds' zeal in protecting the governor's office against intrusion extended, Mrs. Way said, to changing the locks frequently on the governor's office, and on one or two occasions resulted in the governor "cooling his heels" in the hallway until Mrs. Hammonds could admit him with a new key.

Would "Bless Her Out," She Says.
"She interfered in the most trivial and the most weighty matters," said Mrs. Way.

Mrs. Way said she and the governor conferred together under the constant threat of Mrs. Hammonds' disapproval and suspicion. To allay this, she added, Johnston told her "that if Mrs. Hammonds should enter the office during any of the conversations he would make it appear that he was angry with Mrs. Way by 'blessing me out.'"

Man Held For 5 Deaths To Face Special Court
Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—Jacob Vandenberg, charged with multiple murder in which the State alleges his parents, sisters and brother were the victims, will go on trial at a special term of Gaston County Superior Court to be called April 29. Solicitor John G. Carpenter announced here today.

Mr. Carpenter, here for the current session of Mecklenburg County Court, said the docket for the regular term, which convenes in Gastonia, April 15, was overloaded. He predicted that the case would require a full week. The home of W. Vandenberg, Gaston County farmer, was burned late in December and in the ruins were found the bodies of five members of the family. Jacob, the lone survivor, was charged with killing them and setting fire to the house.

Stinson-Page Flight Off Until Wednesday
Bay City, Mich., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—The proposed endurance flight of Eddie Stinson and Randolph Page, Detroit aviators, in an effort to break the existing world's record, has been indefinitely postponed until Wednesday morning.

The secretary received the petition and informed the delegation that the premier was not in the building. The delegation departed quietly.

Unfavorable weather conditions caused the delay.

MUSSOLINI'S GRAND COUNCIL IN SESSION

Fascist Advisory Group Has First Meeting on Various Questions of State.

REVIEWS PACT WITH POPE

Rome, Feb. 25 (United Press).—The Fascist grand council, holding its first session under its new constitution as an official organ of the state, convened tonight in the map hall of the historic Venice Palace.

Premier Benito Mussolini, who raised the council to its present powerful position in the government, presided at the meeting.

Approximately 1,000 persons gathered in the huge square before the palace and cheered Mussolini when he arrived at 10 p. m.

The grand council sent messages to the king expressing unshakable loyalty. Later Mussolini reported for two hours on the accord between the Holy See and the state settling the Roman question and making the Pope a sovereign. He explained the texts of the treaty and concordat signed in connection with the settlement and which will be presented to the parliament for ratification.

The meeting of the grand council, which as an advisory body to the king, now assumes wide power in the government by its privilege of selecting candidates for the premiership, was considered of outstanding importance, because Premier Mussolini was expected to discuss foreign domestic policies. The premier had not expressed himself in regard to the government accord with the Vatican since the treaty was signed.

"I am strong for Luckies."

John Gilbert
Celebrated Screen Star

"Motion picture actors are under a great strain—they need the comforting qualities of a good cigarette. That is why most of us smoke Lucky Strike. The marvelous toasted flavor of Luckies brings complete enjoyment and relaxation but does not hurt the throat or wind. I am strong for Luckies—they are the 'stars' of the cigarette picture. I would rather have a Lucky after a meal than rich pastries or desserts."

JOHN GILBERT

The modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure. Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skillfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This surely confirms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

A SECOND OCEANIC CANAL.

Senator Edge, of New Jersey, has worked with commendable industry for the adoption of his joint resolution providing for a survey of the Nicaraguan Canal route. Now that the Senate has adopted the resolution, it should be passed by the House, so that the work may be undertaken this year. The resolution calls for full information regarding the feasibility of increasing the facilities of the Panama Canal.

Traffic through the Panama Canal is rapidly increasing. Estimates differ as to the time when the traffic will be more than the canal can bear, but no one doubts that facilities for transoceanic traffic must be provided in the reasonably near future. A third set of locks at Panama is suggested, but even this enlargement might not be sufficient for the traffic of twenty years hence.

The United States has acquired by treaty the right to construct a canal through Nicaragua. The survey to be made will yield detailed information regarding the most practicable route, whether by way of the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua or elsewhere; the cost of construction and maintenance, including harbors at the termini, and the cost of acquiring rights of way, franchises, etc.

For several reasons the United States should prepare to construct the Nicaraguan Canal. The growth of commerce can not be accurately estimated, but it is increasing at a rate that will probably call for the services of two canals by the time the Nicaraguan Canal can be completed. The security of the United States, its commerce, and its possessions will be greatly enhanced by a canal through Nicaragua in addition to the canal through Panama. The mobility of the Navy will be increased, and the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts will be shortened via Nicaragua. This shorter route will benefit commerce, particularly in the carrying of fast freight. The possible interruption of transoceanic traffic by earthquake or other natural cause would be practically avoided by providing a second canal, well removed from the first.

Many years were consumed by Congress in discussing the construction of a canal before work was begun at Panama. Probably the Nicaraguan route will be exhaustively discussed. It is well, therefore, that Congress should have accurate information upon which to consider the question of building another canal. After an act has been passed providing for the canal an allowance of ten years, at least, should be made for the work of construction.

The Edge resolution calls only for information. When that information is at hand Congress can adopt a canal policy. There is little doubt that the first step has been taken toward the creation of a second waterway between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

FILM COMPETITION.

The agreement with French film producers, negotiated last May by Will H. Hays, was only a compromise. It has until next September to run, but already American distributors have used up all the licenses under which American films may be sent into France, and fresh negotiations have been started. Where they will lead is problematical. The French public prefers American films to the comparatively inferior native product and American distributors are unwilling to meet the demands of the French producers that they agree to give circulation to the French product in return for permission to exhibit the American product in France. The terms of the Hays agreement permitted the distribution in France of 500 American films. With six months of the agreement yet to run the quota has been exhausted, despite which fact the French producers are talking of a new quota of but 350 importations.

It has been pointed out on numerous occasions that the future of the French film industry is bound up in improvement of its product. That the French people prefer American films means only that American films are superior. To bring about a public demand for French films it is but necessary to improve them until they can meet the American product on common ground. This, however, takes money, and the French producer is not wealthy. The French banks, realizing the preference for American films, refuse to lend him money. For this reason the French producers have offered to abandon insistence upon limitation of imports provided American producers will agree to lend them money. Naturally American producers do not look with favor upon this proposal to build up their competitors.

RADIO COMMISSION OVERRULED.

A decision handed down yesterday by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals requires the Federal Radio Commission to restore the full time broadcasting license of station WGY, located at Schenectady, N. Y. Under the allocation scheme put into effect on November 11, WGY was required to share time with station KGO, located in California. WGY contended that its record of activity and public service entitled it to a full-time position in the air, and the court, asserting that the restriction of WGY would be contrary to the "public interest, convenience and necessity," upheld its contention. At the same time the court took occasion to felicitate the commission on the work it has done, asserting that without regulation conditions in the air would be chaotic.

Despite the compliment, it seems probable that the authority and power of the commission has been struck a serious blow. Since WGY was able to uphold its right to a position in the broadcasting spectrum other than that prescribed by the commission, there seems to be no reason why any other station, dissatisfied with the channel, power or time granted it by the commission, can not also go into court for redress. The Court of Appeals ruling will be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, the appeal, in the meantime, acting to stay its enforcement. If the Supreme Court does not reverse the present finding, the prospect of extensive litigation will be increased.

Of course, property rights in radio enterprises are entitled to the protection of the courts, like all other rights, but the progress of the radio industry may be badly handicapped if the orders of the radio commission should be such as to call for challenge into the courts.

QUICKER AND CHEAPER JUSTICE.

In his recent inaugural address, Gov. Roosevelt of New York said that overhauling of the State's judicial system was one of the three most important problems needing attention. Since then he has studied the problem with the aid of members of the bench and bar as well as the State legislature, and has come to the conclusion that the best solution lies in the creation of a judicial council as a permanent division of the State government. The council would recast the whole judicial system and would then be charged with the responsibility of keeping it abreast of modern practices.

It appears that the governor and the legislature are agreed on such an experiment, and that they have the support of the State Bar Association. The plan is to establish a temporary commission which will work out details for operation of the judicial council. If this commission reports favorably after a year of study on the plan, the State will then set up a permanent council composed of eminent judges and attorneys. Gov. Roosevelt is hopeful that Charles E. Hughes may be persuaded to accept the chairmanship of the temporary commission.

This is another of many plans being tried out by the States to "simplify and cheapen justice." Chief Justice Taft and other eminent jurists of the country have repeatedly advised the States to undertake modernization of their courts and judicial practice, but accomplishments toward elimination of costly delays and superfluous decisions have been very limited. With the legislatures of every State adding dozens of new laws and meddling with the procedure of the courts in piecemeal fashion at almost every session, the need for comprehensive readjustments is more than ever apparent.

The judicial council is not a new scheme of legal reform. At present eleven States have judicial councils, which appear to be working out satisfactorily. Whether or not the plan could be operated to advantage in every State is a question—one that can never be answered until the experiment is made. However, States which are giving the judicial problem serious study are certain to make notable improvements, which will carry their own reward.

SIMPLIFY THE TAX LAW.

It is of interest to taxpayers to know that the Treasury Department has issued a large volume of instructions on how to make income tax returns that are due next month. This ponderous set of instructions is intended only to facilitate the work of figuring out how much of a person's or corporation's income is due the Government, but it is an eloquent argument for further study of the income tax law with a view to simplification. The volume contains 463 pages.

It is fortunate that the average taxpayer will not have to consult this book to file his return. But the income tax law is so involved that many persons and corporations with large incomes will have to employ experts to make out their returns. In spite of its voluminous instructions, the Government found it necessary last year to make 168,501 refunds totaling $142,000,000. It is also necessary in thousands of cases to bring legal proceedings for the collection of taxes on which there is a dispute between the Government and the taxpayer.

Instead of giving attention to the intricacies of the law, Congress at the present session gave its time to discussion of a measure to further complicate the machinery of making refunds. All the evidence brought out shows that the law is being administered as well as possible as it now stands on the books, but that it is in serious need of clarification. Millions of dollars are lost each year by the Government and by private citizens through disputes arising out of this statute.

It would be timely to set a group of experts at work studying how the measure can be clarified. Congress could not be expected to do a good job of it without the recommendation of experts who are acquainted with the present operation of the law. The experience of the past should point the way to many improvements which would be as acceptable to the Treasury Department as to the public. This is a possible means of economy and justice to the taxpayers that should be no longer neglected.

CRIME DOESN'T PAY.

Warden Lewis' report of the economic profits of the convicts entrusted to his care at Sing Sing has attracted considerable public interest. His figures prove conclusively that "crime does not pay," or rather that it did not pay the thieves, forgers, holdups, embezzlers, etc., who fell into the clutches of the law and were committed to Sing Sing. Crime is the most miserably paid profession in America.

The report shows that the robberies of 900 men who entered the institution in 1927 netted them a total of $368,574, or an average of $409.53. On the first glance this appears to be a fair average loot, but when the fact that the robber who is caught usually loses his body and is incarcerated as well, quite another viewpoint must be taken. For this $368,574 the State demanded 12,389 years in prison. Spreading out the "income" of the average prisoner over the number of years that he must serve, we find that on an average the Sing Sing convicts worked for $29.07 per year. The forgers, who came in for the largest profits, had an average annual "income" of $642; but the youthful stickups, who enter the doors of crime with visions of ease and luxury for a few daring raids, were able to average no higher return than $1.30 for each year that they must spend in prison.

The figures are interesting, but of course they are not intended to tell the whole story. In the first place, there is no way of knowing how much any robber realized in his depredations previous to the time he was caught. In the second place, the most clever crooks, who make the most out of crime, sometimes are not caught. If the criminal profession were as jealous of its reputation as are some of the legitimate professions, it might easily challenge the popular interpretation placed on Warden Lewis' figures as grossly misleading.

But the point with which the public is concerned is that no figures, however conclusive of the economic failure of convicts, will have much effect on the activities of the criminal. If there is one thing that is impossible, it is to argue an underworld character, or even a potential criminal, into obedience to law. The crook is by nature a gambler, and he is willing to take chances of making good his escape after a robbery. He recognizes that he will be a loser if caught and convicted, but it is the large chance he has in this country of escaping with no punishment that helps to make crime so prevalent.

The Sing Sing figures have a meaning for law enforcement officers of much more importance than the platitude: "Crime does not pay." They point to the fact that certainty of punishment of the big profiteers in the criminal game is what is most needed in America.

WHAT VALUATION?

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Tariff hearings have about been completed. Information for tariff revision has been assembled. Shortly after March 4 the House ways and means committee will begin the actual work of writing new schedules. Upon what basis will it fix the rates? Will these be based upon the domestic or the foreign valuation of imports? And what safeguards will be set up against the deliberate undervaluations that have made a hollow mockery of many duties imposed by the present tariff?

Should not Congress consult with Chairman Thomas O. Marvin, of the Tariff Commission, upon these points? And with customs experts, particularly those of the New York customs, who have seen the present system at its worst and who have some idea of how many hundreds of millions of dollars this has cost the United States since 1922?

Tariff-making would be rather simple if specific duties of so much per pound, per barrel, per yard or per ton could be fixed. Unfortunately, these can not be applied to imports from all countries and remain protective. Consequently, the ad valorem base has long been used. This yields a variable tax, increasing or decreasing as the value of the imported article decreases or increases.

The tariff of 1922, which is to be revised, is based on the ad valorem principle. As drafted by the House, its rates were established upon the "prevailing wholesale prices" of the American article with which the foreign article was competing or with which it could be compared. Under this plan, the foreign commodity would pay the same amount of duty no matter where it came from and regardless of its cost to the foreign producer.

The Senate rewrote the tariff of 1922 and fixed its ad valorem rates upon foreign valuation. So the lower the foreign price of the product the less duty it now pays. This has led to many abuses and much downright misrepresentation of the most brazen kind. The American customs service has not been able to end these abuses.

In practice, the foreigner has just about determined the amount of duty he pays. When he is honest, the law works reasonably well. When he is not, the American Government is defrauded. Agents of the Tariff Commission and the customs have not been able to establish the actual costs of competing goods. Some countries have virtually deported them. It has been necessary to withdraw them from France. It is only a question of time until they must leave other countries. Foreign industry simply refuses to furnish its production costs. The system, in fact, has failed.

The United States has not had the workings of its own law in its own hands. It has not and never will have jurisdiction over the foreign manufacturer in his own plant.

The next tariff should be based upon some form of domestic valuation. It should not depend upon "business ethics." These vary too much. The world's standards of business honesty are too uncertain, too confused. The one certain thing is that ad valorem rates based upon foreign valuations have injured American business and labor.

Congress must say what system shall be used. Foreign valuation should be discarded, and the earlier that decision is reached the better.

Trying to Put Him in a Hole

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Americans Should Learn Spanish.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: I myself, and doubtless many other Americans, was touched at the boundless hospitality and good will extended to President-elect Hoover by the peoples of Central and South America. These peoples, like ourselves, know the goodness and greatness of Mr. Hoover's heart, and intuitively recognized the wholly disinterested motives of good will that prompted Mr. Hoover to take his Central and South American trip. How can real good will, and, more than good will, good friendship, be built up between the two great peoples of North America and of Central and South America? Good will and good friendship must be built up little by little, step by step. A child must creep before it can walk.

The first step toward genuine understanding and friendship between the two peoples is for them to learn each other's language. The peoples of North America must learn Spanish, and the peoples of Central and South America must learn English. How can we communicate with each other and learn from each other when we can not even speak each other's? Successful as Mr. Hoover's good will trip was, it would have been thrice as successful if he had been able to address our southern neighbors in their own language. The Germans have a strong footing in Central and South America. Why? Because they learn the Spanish language.

Liking comes with understanding. But we can not begin to understand each other and therefore to like each other until we learn to speak each other's language. Therefore let us begin at once to teach in our respective North American and Central and South American schools and colleges the noble, illustrious, musical, poetical Spanish, and the precise and flexible English. Let the newspapers and magazines publish Central and South American news, and have short Spanish lessons and articles written in Spanish in their columns.

The North American peoples and the peoples of Central and South America are truly from two great races—the valiant and enterprising English race, and the courtly and no less valiant Spanish race. Let us extend the hand of friendship to each other!

Lame Duck Sanctuary.
To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: Let all the lame ducks rejoice with exceeding great joy. Commander Byrd has discovered a vast country down in the neighborhood of the South Pole, and annexed it to the United States. Just think of the rich pickings for lame ducks—governorships, judgeships, and the host of other civilian offices that will be open to them when Uncle Sam takes formal possession!

We have hitherto stretched out considerably from what we were when King George said to us—"Go in peace," but we have always had to pay for the stretching. First, we contributed liberally to the French treasury, the Mexican, the Russian, and lastly to that of Spain; but here comes Commander Byrd with a free gift. It is true this new land is a long way off, but distance will have no terrors for lame ducks. Let them fly to this new haven, and joy go with them.

Capture of Vincennes.
To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: "Five States Won for Union by Clark's Feat 130 Years Ago," are the words of the headlines over the story of Clark's capture of Vincennes by John L. Coontz, in The Post of Sunday. That does not tell the whole story, or the half of it. Clark's capture of Vincennes did much more than win five States for the Union. It changed the whole destiny

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILEN

MY Dear Louise:

No doubt I sinned against you many times when you were little, for I didn't know much about the job of training children; but I never told you that lie about George Washington and the cherry tree.

I never told you a booby man would get you if you were naughty; I never lied to you in order to make you be good.

I don't believe in lying, and I want you to abominate lies and liars; but I know it would be a waste of effort to give you the usual twaddle about all good people telling the truth and all liars going to hell.

I'm not even certain that all lies are wicked, for Nature is a liar and Nature's way can't be immoral. The "protective coloring" Nature gives her creatures—the stripes and spots and neutral tints that blend into natural backgrounds and afford concealment from enemies—all these are lies, for their purpose is deceit.

In time of war, men and nations lie with a clear conscience, and none but the lies of the enemy are considered wicked.

The lie is a natural and useful weapon, but even in nature you will observe that it is used only by cowards and sneaks.

If two men of contrasting types are brought before a lodge, let us say, and charged with the sin of dancing—this sounds foolish, but we must have an illustration—one of them stands white-faced and trembling and swears he didn't do it, and the other stands with head high, haughty eyes flashing, and says: "Of course I did it, but what is that to you? I am free born, and do as I please."

In nearly every case, the lie is evidence of a yellow streak.

Those who are proud and unafraid scorn to lie, for they won't assume the role of an inferior trying to protect himself from somebody higher up.

You must live in the world as you find it, and you will find that women lie more than men because they have more to fear and because their punishment is less when they are found out.

But all decent people—even those who lie in an emergency—scorn habitual liars and have little to do with people whose word is worthless. Truth is honor, and honor not only wins respect but makes you feel respectable.

This being true, it follows that a policy of truth telling, altogether aside from the decency of it, pays more profit than the habit of lying.

When you are tempted to lie, as you will be, say to yourself: "I'm not afraid of this guy. Why flatter him by showing a yellow streak?" People too proud to lie usually are too proud to do anything to make a lie necessary.

How Pathetic.
Ohio State Journal: Another pathetic little feature of everyday life in this grave crisis in the affairs of the Republic is a member of the Coolidge Cabinet hearing nothing from Mr. Hoover, strain his ears as he will, and reluctantly deciding that he prefers to return to the private practice of law or something, on account of the duty he owes his family.

Criminal Gradations.
Baltimore Sun: In the case of a New York sneak thief, with a record of frequent but not particularly successful hauls, Judge Koenig imposed a sentence of life imprisonment as the Baumes law directs, but added that commutation after ten years might be advisable, for "the fact that he has been caught so often shows that he is not a very good thief." Neither does it prove that he is a good citizen, but it does indicate gradations in criminality. Perhaps some of the participants in the recent gang murder in Chicago, indeed, might be decapitated by a real fourth offender.

NEW USES FOR HONEY.

Throughout the ages honey has had all sorts of uses. The Greeks especially prized the honey of Hymettus, although Mahaffy said he could get better on the heather hills of Ireland, says the New York Times. A favorite drink of Chaucer's time was wine mixed with honey and spices. Hindust put a drop of honey in the mouth of a new-born male infant. Honey was used as an embalming material in ancient Egypt. But it has been left to this generation, and to so unromantic an agency as the United States Department of Agriculture, to find the strangest of all uses for honey. The department's bee culture laboratory has just announced that a mixture of honey and water makes a wonderful antiseptic solution for motor cars. It isn't just a theory. The State agricultural college has tested it out and found that it works.

Just how much honey to use depends on the temperature. If you expect severe weather, mix equal parts of honey and water. If the wind begins to howl and the thermometer falls to zero or thereabout, the mixture forms a sort of slush. There is no danger of bursting radiators. Only keep your gaskets tight. If honey gets into the engine, it may cause considerable difficulty.

Even in summer the mixture is useful, apparently, for it not only freezes at a lower temperature than water but boils at a higher temperature. So it might be well to have a little honey along to pour into the radiator next August when you set out to climb Mount Mansfield.

DIVIDED INTO 3 UNITSSubcommittees to Decide on Phases of Germany's Ability to Pay.

POINCARÉ EXPERTS' HOST

Paris, Feb. 25 (A.P.).—The reparations conference today divided the present stage of its work into three elements and turned each over to a subcommittee. No plenary session of the full committee is likely to be held again before next Monday.

True to their previous course, the experts refrained today from mentioning any amount which Germany may be called on to pay annually. Neither was there any discussion of the number of these payments.

Tonight the delegates attended the first social function given for them since they assembled two weeks ago. Poincaré, premier, and Mme. Poincaré were host and hostess at a dinner. All the Americans, including Owen D. Young, J. P. Morgan, Thomas Nelson Perkins and Thomas W. Lamont, attended the dinner.

Elements of Discussion.

The three elements into which the discussion has been divided are how much Germany can pay, the method of limited protection such as some sort of foreign committee which the German treasury could consult if the necessity arose.

Sir Josiah Stamp, also of Great Britain, is chairman of the second subcommittee. It is to find a method of limited protection such as some sort of foreign committee which the German treasury could consult if the necessity arose.

American Heads This Division.
Mr. Perkins, who is alternate for Mr. Young, is chairman of the Third Division. He sat with the full committee for the first time this morning and was put to work immediately because of his experience with deliveries in kind, while he was an American observer here.

All three subcommittees are to report at the same time. The full body agreed today that it would be useful to have a report from one only because the questions are so interdependent that each can be considered only as a part of the whole problem.

The impression in reparations circles tonight was that the subcommittee would find that Germany, without the protective clause, can transfer an amount sufficient to guarantee yearly interest on the proposed railroad and industrial bonds. These would total 16,000,000 marks, or approximately $4,000,000. At 5 per cent, this total would call for annual payments of around $200,000,000.

Former Representative
Hurt in Taxi-Car Crash

Chicago, Feb. 25 (U.P.).—Cleveland A. Newton, former representative of St. Louis, was in a serious condition in a hospital here tonight as a result of a collision between a taxicab and a street car.

Newton was riding in the cab when it crashed into a street car. He suffered several cuts and fractured ribs.

UNIFORM ACT URGED TO GOVERN TRAFFIC

National Conference Demands States Unite Behind Centralized Control.

MACHINERY IS PROVIDED

By A. W. KOEHLER,
Secretary, National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.
(The following is the second of a series of special articles dealing with a Nation-wide effort to promote traffic safety and reduce the chaos produced by lack of uniform and scientific laws governing the operation of motor vehicles.)

The American traffic problem is so extensive and complicated and is growing so rapidly that the Nation's best efforts are required to keep abreast of it. The foundation for these efforts must be simple and uniform rules and regulations with centralized control reserved to the States.

It was this realization that the National Conference for Street and Highway Safety, predicated its work and concentrated its efforts mainly upon the drafting of a uniform vehicle code.
This is the most scientific and expeditious method of helping the individual States help themselves and each other and bring about effective and reasonable control of the 24,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States.

In its final form, as approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and the American Bar Association, the code consists of four individual statutes. They are:

A uniform motor vehicle registration act, uniform motor vehicle operator's and chauffeurs' license act, and a uniform act regulating the operation of vehicles on highways.

State Machinery Demanded.

All regulation, the conference agreed,
must rest upon adequate State machinery for making it effective. The uniform registration act is, consequently, the starting point. This act provides the organization found necessary by experience to the successful administration of the motor vehicle law. The conference found a wide disparity among the States' disposition of this matter. In some the duties of vehicle registrar were vested in the retary of state, while others charged various already existing boards or departments with the work. In one Western State, the responsibility was lodged with the warden of the State penitentiary.

The registration act of the uniform code provides for a vehicle commissioner as head of a department of the State government, or a bureau of an existing department, which shall have for its exclusive functions the adoption and enforcement of the registration and enforcement of the registration as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the code.

Predicated upon all available data covering the experience of States and the consensus of experts, the act then proceeds to build up machinery for regulation through registration. Individual sections under the eight titles of the act relate to the manner of registration of all motor vehicles, trailers and semitrailers, the issuance and use of registration cards and plates, renewals and transfers, registration by manufacturers and dealers and non-residents and suspension of registration upon notice of theft or embezzlement.

Driving Without Owner's Consent.

Title VI of the act covers the driving of vehicles without owner's consent, receiving or transferring stolen vehicles, injuring or tampering with vehicles. The remaining titles deal with the penalties which shall be imposed for the misdemeanors or felonies constituted by violation of various provisions of the act, and the repeal of existing statutes to make way for the uniform act.

The second statute of the code, the uniform motor vehicle operator's act, provides that certificates of title must be obtained before vehicles can be registered.

The special anti-theft provisions deal with the reports of stolen and recovered motor vehicles, the alteration of engine or serial numbers and receiving or transferring stolen vehicles. Another title provides that dealers in used vehicles must be licensed by the department for records of purchases and sales and possession of certificates of title, and places all fees and revenues under this act in a special authority fund to be used for enforcement of the act.

Charlie Chaplin Seriously Ill Of Ptomaine Poison Attack

Famous Screen Comedian
Sent to Bed for 5 Days;
Picture Is Halted.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 25 (United Press).—Charlie Chaplin, famous screen comedian, was reported seriously ill of ptomaine poisoning at his home here tonight.

As Chaplin prepared to leave for his studio he suffered a dizzy spell and fell to the floor. His personal physician, Dr. Cecil Reynolds, answered an urgent call and ordered the comedian to bed for at least five days.

While Chaplin's illness was believed to have been caused by poisoned food, it was thought possible that he was suffering from appendix trouble.

Officials at the Chaplin studio said that the actor had been bothered by his appendix for a number of years, but had refused advice of several physicians to undergo an operation for its removal.

Dr. Reynolds ordered Chaplin to rest completely during the five days. The physician said that even if the ptomaine trouble did not become more serious he would keep the comedian under observation.

While he described Chaplin's condition as serious, Dr. Reynolds said he entertained no doubt that Chaplin would recover.

When Chaplin felt the dizziness coming on he asked for a glass of water, then dropped just as he was about to accept it.

"City Nights," has been halted indefithat resumption of filming would be

IN THE PLAY HOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

S. E. Cochran offers the National Theater Players in "The Little Spitfire," a new comedy by Myron C. Fagan.
Staged by Addison Hull. Scenery by Charles Seidler.

THE CAST:
Mary Gorman.....Freddie Sherman
Frank Gorman.....Helen Wallace
Peter Gorman.....(The Little Spitfire).

Frank Gorman.....Mary Westbroton
Peter Gorman.....Wilfred Lytell
Peter Gorman.....Charles Hampden
Stanley Markham.....Adelaide Hibbard
Stanley Markham.....Robert Brister
Stanley Markham.....Arthur Rhodes

Every now and then some one in the cast has a chance to take the bit and run away with the play; to mix a metaphor or two. It so happens that this week at the National, where the National Theater Players are getting into their second semester, one Freddie Sherman, a juvenile, romps away with the honors.

The play is Myron C. Fagan's comedy,
"The Little Spitfire," which leaves the leading man, Wilfred Lytell, nothing more to do than stand around and look pretty, make a few insipid speeches, and get one final climb over the footlights. As some one of the male members of the cast had to supply a lot of action it fell to the lot of young Sherman, kin, no doubt, to the general.
The boy brings up the heavy artillery and shoots the play to pieces.

Strange what can be done with a dash of plot. This comedy concerns itself with the marriage of a chorus girl into the ranks of the millinaires, and social elixir. "Gypsy" comes from the Bronx to Southampton, Long Island, with a load of slang and a penchant for inciting antagonism amongst her in-laws, especially mother.

Mary Newton, leading lady with the National Theater Players, essays the role of "Gypsy." The chorus who really never goes "ratty"—and Miss Newton brings to the part a very charming and refreshing manner. The girl, of course, has a brother—two brothers, in fact,
one of whom goes wrong, steals, and gets the Bronzites into quite a bit of trouble. The other, the wisecracking brother, always putting his best foot forward, is the engaging role entrusted to Freddie Sherman, with such pleasant results. He is married, this brother, and the banter between husband and wife is delicious. Miss Helen Wallace, dependable at all times, plays the wife.

Important and exacting roles are entrusted to Mrs. Hibbard and Charles Hampden—mother and father of the son who weds the chorine—and they play their parts in good taste. Miss Enid Romany, a villainess by the mere droop of an eyelid, is cast as the sinister influence in the life of "The Little Spitfire," the chorus girl nick-named
"Gypsy."

Robert Brister, never better, plays opposite Miss Romany as a scheming stock manipulator. What a fiend he turns out to be!

There is quite a dash of melodrama in
"The Little Spitfire," and enough change of scenery to keep stage hands busy the night through; but everything arrives on schedule time, and the players do credit to their reputation. The play is exceedingly well directed.

DICKEY LOSES FIGHT TO GET NEWSPAPER

Supreme Court Declines to Review Kansas City Star and Times Sale.

TRUSTEES' ACTS UPHELD

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to review the sale of the Kansas City Star, the Kansas City Times and the Kansas City Weekly Star to the Kansas City Star Co.

The properties were sold to the late Irwin R. Kirkwood and associates, on a bid of $11,000,000, of which $2,500,000 was in cash. Walter S. Dickey, a Kansas City publisher, who also submitted a bid, asked the Supreme Court to pass on the sale.

Under the will of William R. Nelson, founder of the Kansas City Star and the other newspapers, they were to be sold by a board of trustees after the death of his wife and daughter. To handle the properties and dispose of them a board of trustees was provided in Mr. Nelson's will, to be appointed by the presidents of the Universities of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

The funds obtained through the sale are to be applied under the will in providing a gallery of works of fine art.

Dickey bid $8,000,000 cash for the newspapers alone, leaving the real estate, valued at $2,000,000 and accounts receivable, placed at a million dollars, in the hands of the trustees. Alleging that there was a third bid for $13,000,- 000, of which $8,000,000 was to be in cash, Dickey charged that the trustees had failed to accept the most advantageous bid, and sought to have the sale set aside.

The Attorney General of Missouri, held by the State courts to be the proper person to bring suit should the sale be challenged, after reviewing Dickey's complaint, refused to proceed, and Dickey then made the appeal to the courts. After hearing all the charges, the State courts refused to set aside the sale, and Dickey asked the United States Supreme Court to pass on the controversy.

FIELD MARSHAL, BY WAR, SCORES AT 50 TO 1

Longest Shot By Famous Sire Wins

Promising 2-Year-Old of 1927 in Running Mood at Miami.

Orville Brown Rides 2 Winners and Barely Misses Third.

HALF-BRED RACE TRACK, Miami, Feb. 25 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Two years ago Field Marshal was considered the most promising 2-year-old in the stable of Marshall Field, but the chestnut son of Man o' War—Little Flower never raced to his owner's expectations and he was sold. Field Marshal, now running in the name and colors of Rummage & Knott, won a $1,000 claiming event at the Miami Jockey Club track this afternoon at 50 to 1.

The gelding is the longest-priced winner of the meeting, and probably is the longest-priced winner by the superior horse owned by Sam Ridd. Incidentally, Field Marshal is bred in the sample, for he is a half-brother to Boots, which won the Suburban Handicap and other turf fixtures in the colors of A. K. Macomber a dozen years ago.

her of laps around the running track, however, Trainer Mike Martin doing the assignments as to the number of laps needed. The only one who escaped this was Bob Burns, the human skeleton, who cannot afford to lose even an ounce. This young southpaw, by the way, declares that he gained four pounds since the 1928 season closed, but this extra avoirdupois is so cleverly hidden that he looks as thin as ever.

Of the lot which reported to work today, there are no fat men. Catcher Al Boal is hard as nails as the result of work chopping. "Bump" Hadley, who usually reports to work in a tankard, has been working in a gymnasium all winter and appears to be in pretty good shape, with his leg muscles hard and his wind good. In fact, the others have much weight to be worked off. On what they showed this morning, Johnson and Martin will have no trouble in banking their charges do all of the work assigned to them.

Johnson and Martin Differ on Worth of Vellay Ball Games.

Tomorrow Trainer Mike Martin will install the velleay ball court. He and Manager Johnson differ as to the value of this game as a conditioner. Mike contends that it develops the players' legs and wind, and yet comes under the head of play making it an easy dose to take. Johnson believes that because of its roughness the rival teams take the games too seriously and that danger to pitchers injuring their arms on hard swings at balls which they miss, the game may lead to a big war. Johnson, however, is willing to let the game be staged, but has told his men his opinion and stated that those who do not want to play do not have to.

Kennedy Stars Win.

Kennedy Red Stars won their fourth game of the season last night by defeating the Tremonts, 26 to 13, in the Central High School Gymnasium. The teams were deadlocked, 6 to 6, at the half. The Kennedys played the Army Headquarters Five tonight at the barracks.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT OF KINGS

DUKEDOM. From out Tia Juana way, where the gees perform more or less erratically I have a little feed for you. The gees are put down in the bin. It is none other than Doc Davis' good hide, DUKEDOM, which showed a brilliant flash of speed Sunday, and was eased up when beaten. Today is the day, hence set in the old iron men and let your conscience be your guide. Name your own second and third horses.

Down at Miami, the happy bag sent along by the chief of staff is the good and consistent AGAPANTHUS. Lamp the comment, then go visit the uncle—"There will be a lot of people gambling that this speed marvel will not go the mile and 70 yards. Let 'em rave, for the Odom castoff will come from the shoulder up to the neck. The others will never get near him." Listen like winning info to me. PIGEON WING, if which does not seem to fancy this SUN AIRBOR. You have the answer in your lily white mitt.

LEW BLACK also seems to have a half Nelson on the long end of the opening scramble while MINNEVUS stands out. Over at Jeff Park I am slipping you ASPIN LAKE as the XXX special. This trick has been showing some sensational trials in private and which are probably responsible for the over-optimistic plan.

Plenty of hale planted here on this bird and now we come to the devil himself and none other than COLONEL BOARD with the one qualification, the track must be fast. Yes, yes, I know that you all think he is qualifying for a distance race, but he has been on this mob of beetles three weeks from the jack and unless you're sold from the shoulder up to the neck, have the old two mags and riding right smack bang on the beeper.

G. W. ENGAGES ARCH RIVAL TONIGHT

Colonials Battle C. U. Five in Last Game of Court Season.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY courtmen will be given their last chance of the year tonight to avenge themselves for early season defeats when they stake up against their ancient rivals, Catholic University in the Colonial gym, 3010 H street, at 8:30. It will be the final contest of the year for the Colonials, who, so far, have won only one game. If they can take the measure of the Brooklands team tonight, it will help somewhat to make their followers forget their past defeats this season.

Another G. W. team will be seeking revenge on Catholic University also, tonight, when the Colonial Club engages the C. U. frosh in a preliminary to the varsity which is slated to get underway at 7 o'clock. The Colonial players were beaten out by 3 points when they invaded Brookland last Wednesday night, and the bitter memory of that defeat has not been forgotten. They will be striving to set a good example for the varsity tonight by copping the opening game.

Colonia Have Not Beaten Catholic U. Since 1927.

Coach Crum will send a fighting bunch of men into the fray tonight, however, and if they play up to their usual form, may be expected to walk off with the victory. The Colonials appeared last on the huge floor at Brookland last week, but playing on their home site tonight, may show up as an entirely different team. They will also have the backing of their own crowd tonight, something that was entirely lacking at the C. U. game. With only one game on the right side of the ledger, the G. W. students will still count the season a success if their team can but conquer in tonight's skirmish. A win over C. U. is rather above all things, but not once since February, 1927, has it been accomplished. Since the team of Coach Crum took the "reindeer" team in the G. W. gym that year, a Buff and Blue team has never vanquished the Cardinals.

J. C. C. ARROWS WIN.

J. C. C. Arrows defeated the Senators, 30 to 20, in the Center Gymnasium, Saturday, with 11 points, starred for the Arrows.

NOEL HOUSE AHEAD.

Noel House Basketers, in the 100-pound class, defeated the Congress Basketers, 23 to 14, for games with the winners, phone Lincoln 3001 between 7 and 8 o'clock.

ST. JOHN'S CLASS GAME.

The Second Year C Team defeated the Junior High Department, 26 to 23, in a St. John's Gymnasium. Walker, with 9 points, starred for the winners. R. Schaeffer, with 14 points, was the high scorer.

HORNETS BEST TIGERS.

The Lanham Hornets swamped the McNamee Tigers, 19 to 0, in an interclass game at the Cook School. The Hornets did not stop the heavy hitting of the Hornets.

CAPITAL SCHOOL TEAMS ACTIVE IN 3 MAJOR SPORTS

Court Season

Athletes.4 Teams Entered in Court Tournaments at
W. & L., Penn.

ALTHOUGH the recent snow and its after effects have kept the outdoor athletes in the five local high schools inactive the past few days, the activity noted now among the scholastic athletes is almost unprecedented.

Basketball, football and baseball, the three major sports, are getting their share of attention now, even though the latter two branches are far from in season. Most all of the schools have either finished their court seasons or are getting ready for tournaments while all are making ready for the coming baseball season.

Western, Central and Eastern are waiting for the weather to permit some spring football practice while Coach Harrell has already had one of two of his Tech candidates out heaving the oval around. This was before the snow, though.

Although most of the schools were expected to be represented in either the Penn or Washington and Lee tournaments, only Western will compete in the Penn games this week.

Western, with Coach Moore, will take its entire team to Philadelphia next week, including the Thompson brothers, Herbie and Jimmie, Capt. Woods, Baer, Freeman, Hunt, Hatfield, Goubeau and Manager Wyatt. These players are the same which aided the team in finishing in second place in the high school basketball series recently ended.

While these basketball events have been taking place to keep players, coaches and students alike on the go, the baseball season in most every instance has been creeping its way into the order of things among the five schools. Central was the first to start indoor drills a week ago last Friday, while Western followed suit last Monday.

Eastern and Tech took to the call midway last week while Business has yet to announce baseball. Only workouts in the gymnasium are being engaged in by the schools in action to date, and these by pitching and catching aspirants.

Eastern Well Fortified in Pitching Talent; J. Southpaw.

Central has had Rose and Mehler as the pitchers in its gymnasium workouts lately with Millwright and Stan the catchers. Western has had Fletcher as its chief pitcher while Coach Ahearn has still to know definitely who his catching aspirants are.

Eastern is well equipped with pitchers in the half dozen out for drills. Curtin and Phillips, the latter three are left-handers. Eastern has only one catcher of known ability to date in Snyder, who divides the backstopper honors with Jimmy Munro last year.

Tech has Ennor and Spiegel as its variety pitchers either last year or this year, while the latter three are its chief battery men in practice.

Turner Meets Rico

In Stranded Mat Match

"Bull" Turner will be the opponent of Joe Rico, who is a veteran of the game and has been wrestling for years in the Jersey City police force.

Turner looked up with Rico here last year at the Arcadia, finally succeeding in winning after a hard struggle. Rico is a veteran of the game and has been wrestling for years in the Jersey City police force.

Maryland U. Students

Stage Bouts Tonight

Five wrestling and one boxing bout will be staged tonight for Maryland University students and friends in Ritchie Gymnasium, College Park, starting at 8:30 o'clock.

With the exception of the feature wrestling contest between Thompson, Maryland, and Bjornson, Norwegian middleweight champion, all of the bouts will be contested by students.

Herman Epstein will meet Kenneth Remsburg in a wrestling match, scheduled by popular demand. They are middleweights. George Lynn, formerly of Washington and Lee, and Irving Bachman, 1928 Maryland State inter-scholastic wrestling champion, will oppose in another middleweight clash.

Willie Frazier, son of Senator Frazier, will try his hold on William James in the welterweight class, while "Col" Willis and Bernard Jones, featherweights, will wind up the mat program.

John Ward, former welterweight boxing champion of the Maryland National Guard, will box three or four fellow students in separate bouts.

ST. PAUL FIVE IN WIN.

The St. Paul's Lutherans bested the Montrose Five last night, 29 to 23, in a spirited encounter. Alderton, with 16 points, starred for the winners.

St. P. Luth. G. P. P. Montrose. G. P. P. Alderton, 16; 0-1; Liscum, 11; 0-0; Roy, 11; 0-0; Schull, 11; 0-0; Olinson, 11; 0-0; Cavanaugh, 11; 0-0.

TYPEWRITER GRAYS WIN.

The United Typewriter Grays defeated the Original Anacostia Eagles last night, 33 to 17, at Central.

Georgetown Prep Wins
Over Central Five, 29-14

The Georgetown Prep Five, with Cameron and Watkins playing leading roles, defeated Central High yesterday afternoon in a 29-14 game at Garrett Park. Central did not use its regular line-up because of its game tonight with the Penn Freshmen at Philadelphia.

Cameron and Watkins totaled 5 baskets for 10 points to share the honors. Rehkopf played a good defensive game in addition to chiming in with 3 field goals for 6 points.

With the Fair
Athletes

ALL entry blanks for the South Atlantic A. U. basketball tournament must be in the Post sport department by noon Friday, and the closing hour for entering the tournament approaches increased interest is noted among the girls' teams.

Several clubs are not aware that in the girls' eliminations each team is permitted to enter nine girls instead of the eight allowed in the boys' series. Girls' rules will be strictly applied and the most ardent advocate of conservative competition for girls will not find cause to criticize any of the rules laid down for the fair athletes in the A. U. tournament.

Eight-minute quarters will be played and experienced human physical instructors will officiate in the games.

HAWAIIANS IN TOURNEY.

The Hawaii A. C., a newly formed set, under the management of Anna Willner and composed of girls living in Georgetown, have made application to play in the A. U. tourney. Aside from Miss Willner, members of the Hawaii team at present are Marie Willner, Rena Bryan, Sadie Klatta, Dorothy Fling, Jenny Torreyson, Mary Beamer and Nellie Lyddane.

Many of the above names are familiar to readers of the Fair Athlete column through their activity on Georgetown playground basketball and track teams. Sadie Klatta and Anna Willner are particularly well known.

THE NEW WHITE SIX LIGHT DELIVERY TRUCK

Built for the Modern Demands of Speed and Economy in Business — —

INCREASED business follows the policy of today's sales delivered today. The new White was built to make such service possible and has set up a new standard of values in the light delivery field. Conceived, engineered and built by White, the new light delivery Six has a background of experience, resources and proved performance that cannot be attached to any other truck of the same capacity rating.

Complete Traffic Mastery

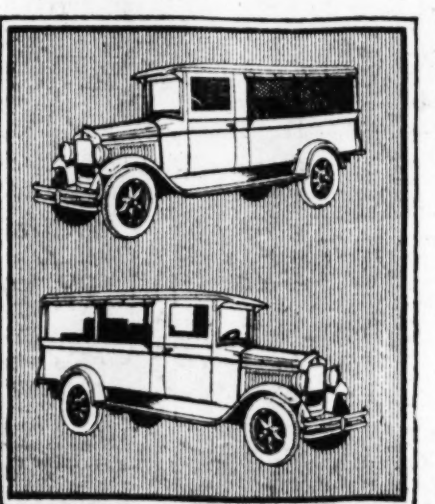

In flexibility, ease of handling and acceleration the new White sets a new record in truck performance—capable of higher average speed under all operating conditions. Top traffic speed is reached with surprising ease and diminished to a dead stop with the application of the positive 4-wheel hydraulic brakes.

Every refinement for customer satisfaction and driver comfort has been built into the job.

Exhaustive Tests

For the past six months these new Whites have been put through relentless demonstrations. Day and night, month after month, they have traveled every kind of road, in every kind of weather, at grueling speeds, and all under capacity loads. Several have passed the 100,000-mile mark with an amazing freedom from interruption on the road—proving again the rugged stamina for which all Whites are famous.

All this remarkable performance is attained with unusually low fuel consumption.

The Screened Express Body protects load from theft and provides rolled side curtains for bad weather. Same body available without screen sides. Chassis equipment same as shown for Panel Body Chassis.

Stake and Platform Body designed to accommodate a wide range of haulage requirements. The closed cab for driver adds to the efficiency of fast express operation. Chassis equipment same as shown for Panel Body.

On a test run of 329 miles, a new White with a capacity load covered the ground in nine hours—an average speed of 36½ miles per hour. This route includes 110 miles of mountain roads, proving the capacity of the new White to maintain a high average speed over steep-grade country.

In 12,947 miles of operation, over every kind of road, with temperatures ranging from zero to summer heat, a new White averaged 30 miles per hour under full load for the whole distance.

In these exhaustive tests no other truck was found capable of matching the sustained performance and economy of the new White.

In hundreds of businesses the new White will demonstrate an amazing reduction in operating costs and time—a new efficiency in transportation that means greater profits and service for the truck user.

White Built Throughout

The new White is built throughout in the vast White factory at Cleveland. In the long years of White leadership there have been built up an experience and equipment in precision manufacturing that make possible White quality. Such an investment enables White to manufacture in keeping with the most advanced engineering design. The new White is a notable example of how this policy enables White to pass on to users of transportation the benefits of the best engineering thought.

No matter what use you make of a truck, the new White offers advantages never before available in this field. On the basis of cost per package, per load, per eight hours of transportation service, there is no truck built that can do the job of the new White. The new White will prove economies and efficiency in your own operation that will amaze you. Call the nearest White branch or dealer.

627 BY BAUM LEADS IN PIN TOURNAMENT

Star Man Sets Pace
in Newspaper Event;
Darnall Second.

JOHN J. BAUM, of the Evening Star, took the lead in the championship flight of the newspaper men's tournament last night as the first elimination round got under way at the King Pin yesterday, when he rolled 627 to pass "Chick" Darnall, of the Post, who registered 598 in the afternoon. Phil Heflinger and F. B. Carman, also of the Star, took third and fourth honors with respective scores of 594 and 574. Baum's games were 112, 134, 88, 141, 122.

Jergens, of the Star, who led in the afternoon in the consolation flight, retained that position when the highest consolation score registered at the night session was 523 by Eugene Parlee, of the Bulletin. R. W. Downs is now third for consolation honors with 520. Twenty-eight bowlers still face tests in the championship flight and are scheduled to roll Wednesday night, while 38 must still face the pins in the consolation flight. Present indications are that scores that better the 500 mark will see action for another week as less than half of the bowlers for championship honors bettered the 500 mark.

A decrease of $2,000,000 in borrowings from Federal Reserve banks is shown for the week ended February 20 in the Federal Reserve Board's conditions statement, which reported that member banks in 101 leading cities, made public yesterday.

The statement shows decreases for the week of $42,000,000 in loans, of $19,000,000 in investments, of $246,000,000 in net demand deposits, and of $12,000,000 in time deposits. Loans to member banks declined $17,000,000 at all reporting banks, while holdings of other securities show little change over the week.

The principal reason for the decrease in Federal Reserve Bank loans for the week is the decline of $67,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, of $1,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, and of $28,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Regular Dividends Declared.

The F. H. Smith Co. yesterday announced the declaration of the regular semi-annual dividend of $3.75 per share on its outstanding 7 1/2 percent cumulative preferred stock, and $3.50 per share on its outstanding 7 percent cumulative preferred stock, both payable March 15, 1929, to holders of record March 5. Books will close after business March 5 and will reopen March 16.

The F. H. Smith Co. is one of the oldest investment houses in the city, and since 1873, when it was founded, it has grown into an institution of national reputation, and is one of the largest out of the United States, and in more than 55 foreign countries and territories.

According to unofficial reports to the Reserve Bank, retail trade in the past week has been favorable in the Federal Reserve District, embracing this city. Easter goods are reported moving well under the impetus of the comparatively early start of the season.

The Hoover inauguration, which will bring hundreds of thousands of visitors to Washington, is looked forward to as a stimulant to retail business, and Richmond and Baltimore both expect a favorable reaction from the passage of thousands of motorists on the way to this city.

Several thousand workers in the Fifth District will be affected by an increase of 5 cents in the wage level of shop employees of the Chesapeake & Ohio system effective this week. The increase is expected to be favorable in the Fifth District, embracing this city.

Five Bank Stocks Traded In.

Five bank stocks came out in moderate trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, as the local board assumed activity in the market. Federal-American National Bank common moved up more than a point to 34 1/2. Riggs National Bank advanced 1/8 to 17 1/2. Commercial Bank of the District moved 1/8 to 10 1/2.

Plans for further activity in the field of cooperative advertising were outlined by Chairman H. H. Thompson, of the advertising committee, District of Columbia Bankers' Association, before a dinner meeting of his group last night in the Raleigh Hotel.

PHILIPPINES TARIFF

CHANGE IS OPPOSED

Disturbance of Free Trade

Relations, Witnesses Say,

May Cause Inquiry.

PRESENT LAW DEFENDED

(Associated Press.)

Strenuous opposition to a disturbance of the existing reciprocal trade relations between the United States and the Philippines was voiced yesterday before the House ways and means committee at the opening of hearings on the administrative provisions of the tariff act.

The present law recognizes the legal right to impose duties against Philippine imports, but exempts all island products from tariffs under a separate clause permitting free entry of the products where they contain not more than 20 per cent of foreign materials.

No witness before the committee yesterday questioned the legal right to impose duties or to restrict importation of certain Philippine products. Opposition, however, was voiced against farm group proposals for tariffs on the islands' copra and coconut oil and against a timber tariff reduction to restrict Philippine sugar shipments to this country as an aid to Western sugar growers. Copra is admitted free from all countries, while coconut oil is dutiable, but free from the islands.

Existing Conditions Defended.

The testimony in opposition to the disturbance of the existing trade relations was confined mainly to the economic and moral side of the connection between the islands and the United States.

He contends that those urging tariffs on the ground that the islands' imports were causing injury to the economy of the Philippines, that the industry had asserted that such injury was contingent on future great development in the islands, and were "appropriate" in injury rather than being injury.

Pears Resulting Injury.

McIntyre said Congress had more power over unincorporated territories,

such as the Philippines, than over incorporated islands, like Hawaii, and therefore the obligation to look after the people of the former was greater.

He added that proponents of tariff and sugar restrictions had not shown that the changes were necessary to prevent an injury to the United States and that no serious attempt had been made to suggest a plan to lessen the "obviously resulting injury" to the Philip-

SENATE EXPECTED TO VOTE TODAY ON MARKET MEASURE

Glass and Bruce in Counter
Insinuations of Influence

DISTRICT CHIEFS' STAND IS CAUSE OF CONFUSION

Stalker Bill Designates Site
in Southwest; B. & O.
Held Dissatisfied.

The Stalker bill to establish a farmers' produce market in Southwest Washington was finally disposed of in the Senate today. The House passed the measure at the last session.

The Senate considered the bill for an hour yesterday, but decided to put off action until today. What will happen when the voting stage is reached is problematical.

Stalker Bill Designates Site

In the debate on the measure yesterday, Senator Glass (Democrat) of Virginia, praised the Southwest site, saying it was a logical one for the market.

Collusion With Railroads Denied.

Each then denied that he had been induced by the railroads involved. The Baltimore & Ohio has its freight terminal at Eckington, a section that was indicated as a market site by many Maryland farmers.

When the debate was over the position of the District Commissioners was a mystery to those senators who had been listening.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, who, with Bruce, has been fighting the Stalker bill, said:

"I have a letter on my desk from the District Commissioners saying that they are opposed to this bill. I have a letter from the District Commissioners on my desk saying that they are in favor of it."
